MERRY CHRISTMAS.

How the Joyous Anniversary Will be Observed.

Preparations for Feasting Among Rich and Poor.

Services in the Churches in the Morning.

Festivities in the Afternoon and Evening.

Liberal Provision at the Charitable Institutions.

Observance of the Day in Other Places.

So many kindly thoughts, so much written charity, and such true religion have sanctified these previous days preceding the actual day we celebrate, and have associated with its remembrance throughout the year, that Christmas scarcely needs the Festivals who usher them that their great festival is not of Christmas origin, but dates back over traditions and Aryan times. We think, too, that the desire of rejoicing observed throughout Christendom at this season, prevented among the white races long before the birth of Jesus the favor of mankind. He has it literally owed among them Isis-Horus, great people who have not been overcome by Bethlehem. In India, not only in Hindostan, but throughout the Deccan and the Carnatic, and among Tamu Malayan, lying on the shores of the Mahanaim, in Cape Comorin, backed in the South-eastern Africa to a race, town or village which is not now celebrating the great festival of the Dessera, which commences with the 21st day of December, and lasts all the month, commencing the short-est day, the musical commencement of the year. It lasts for twelve days, and is marked by the immediately thereof charity which distinguishes our Christmas begging. The great occasion is the Sunna or anthrop, during which, from sunrise to sunset, the most absolute license is permitted to domestics, and to the poor. The most squalid Indian can sleep on the back the poor Man, Malayan, and can entreat, without fear of refusal, the most sanctified Brahmin to cut carrots, but not to accept the specially rich food and sweetmeats prepared for the day. In the fanaes all kinds of tricks are performed by servants upon their masters, and are offered with impunity, and even compliments. The houses of the wealthy are thrown open, even to Europeans, and the guests are treated with otter of roses, sweetmeats and betel-nut, and on departing are sprinkled with fragrant rose water. The great chiefs, who still retain a nominal independence, expend enormous sums at these festivals, in feasts of wild beasts and exhibitions of athletes. The most famous performances of this nature are given at Baroda, by the powerful Mahratta Sovereign known as the Guicowar. The resemblance to the Saturnalia of the Romans is too obvious to need comment, and, indeed, it is now universally conceded that the Hindoos and the Romans possessed a common ancestry, from whom, among other things, they both derived the Winter festivals.

It is a gracious and consoling reflection that the Savior of man should have been born to bless the world at a time when all hearts were opened by the peculiar sentiments of the season. No doubt that in that auspicious year when the star of Bethlehem shone in the oriental sky, the Jews, who had been more than partially Hellenized, were keeping high festival in company with their Greek teachers and their Roman conquerors. In that warm climate it is impossible to pasture the sheep in the Summer time, for the sterile and rocky soil is parched with drouth. In the Winter, when juicy herbage covers the slopes of the hills, and the coming harvest of showers wakes and ruffles on the plain, the sheep are pastured for many months without molestation to the fold. They run from plain to plain and from hill to hill, under the care of shepherds very different from the fantastic creations of Arcadia and from the beauties of Virgil. They are watched by stalwart and bearded men, lance in hand and sword by side, to preserve them from the attacks of the nomadic Turcoman who have never been rooted out of Asia. In the still solemnity of the night season, far away from that hum of great cities which is as ceaseless as the murmur of the all-covered sea, these men contemplate their flocks nibbling the short sweet grass. The stars, so bright in climes blessed by the sun, and untainted by the smoke of countless chimneys, poem very close, and the whole soul is impressible with ideas of beauty and sublimity. From such scenes as this in old Chaldea arose that poetic science of astronomy, which has so greatly enlarged and expanded the human intellect. On such a scene as this, and to men whose minds were attuned to the supernatural and full of the sweetness of silent beauty, there came the most glorious vision that the world has ever seen, one so supreme that the pencil of no painter has ever attempted to portray its splendors. There came upon the blackness of the sky blotting out the wild fire of the stars, a glorious company of angels singing of a new bond between earth and heaven, a new tie between man and God. They sang in strains whose beauty could never be forgotten, and whose sweetness must have haunted the hearers ever after, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good-will toward man." And the promise has been truly kept. Never has the rich man at this season forgotten the poor man. Never has the spirit of love departed from this auspicious time, never have human hearts utterly closed on this day. The poor man becomes contented, the rich man becomes humble, the proud man becomes genial, the avaricious man becomes generous. There is a psychical influence born of the infinite, and reflected from human heart to human heart in waves of feeling, which makes men now what they should be always, and perhaps, may be in the future habitually. It is the light of Paradise, which streams from the gates opened but for a day, which shines upon us and blesses us as we go.

Christmas in the Churches.

Morning services at Trinity will commence at 9½ o'clock, and the grand service at 11. Rev. Dr. OGILBY, Rev. GEORGE FERGUSON, and Rev. Mr. KEMBLE will officiate at both services, and Rev. Dr. DIX will deliver the sermon. The musical programme will be as follows: Processional Hymn 47, ancient and modern; Introit, Hymn 49, ancient and modern; H. G. THUNDER, Kyrie, Second Mass; MOZART. Nicene Creed, Second Mass; MOZART. Twelfth Mass; MOZART. "He is blessed who cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest." Sanctus Cerda; TALLIS. Sanctus, Second Mass; MOZART. Agnus Dei, Second Mass; MOZART. "Gloria in Excelsis," Second Mass; MOZART. Nunc Dimittis; Recessional Hymn 43, ancient and modern; "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." Even Song—Processional Hymn 48, ancient and modern; Cantate, chant; Benedic, chant; Recessional Hymn 48, ancient and modern.

ST. PAUL'S CHAPEL.

The chapel is decorated in the usual manner, the panels of the ceiling, the organ chamber, the pulpit and the lectern being twined with evergreens. The fluting of the columns and their bases and capitals are decorated with holly. The services will include a Christmas anthem, the choir being reinforced for the occasion.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH.

This beautiful ecclesiastical edifice affords remarkable opportunities of decoration for the adornment of its consecration, the cross being standard. The morning service will be performed by Rev. Dr. MONSON, and the music will be specially beautiful. The organ will be assisted by two harps.

ST. JOHN'S CHAPEL.

St. John's Chapel is not unusually decorated, though spacious enough, are the only material used. The altar is dressed with flowers. In addition to the usual choral services grand anthems will be given.

ST. ANN'S.

At this little edifice the services will commence at an early hour and last nearly through the day. The church is prettily decorated with evergreens, and the chancel has been almost covered with flowers. The musical selections performed will be choice and varied.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The Christmas arrangements at Christ Church, on Fifth avenue, are unusually elaborate and impressive. The church will be beautifully decorated, and the chancel especially will be profusely ornamented with flowers and evergreens. Christ Church has been distinguished, of late, for the peculiar style of its music, and this will be amply illustrated on the occasion of the festival. The following programme, for Christmas morning, has been furnished by Dr. GUTTON, organist of Christ Church: Processional, "O Come, all ye Faithful." Venite and psalms to Anglican chants, from CUTLER'S Trinity Psalter, Te Deum by CAWOOD, Anthem, "Glory to God on High and on Earth Peace," &c., from MOZART'S Twelfth Mass, by a full chorus of fifty voices. Hymn, "Shout the Glad Tidings." After service the hymn will be, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." The Right Rev. Dr. POTTER, Bishop of the diocese, will officiate in the morning, and Rev. Dr. THOMPSON, of Chicago, will preach, both being supported by Rev. Mr. DURHAM, assistant rector of the parish.

CHURCH OF THE INCARNATION.

The Christmas music at this church will be unusually attractive. The selections are from BOOK, MILLARD, BERGE, GUETNER, &c., &c. The choir consists of Mme. SARRITE, soprano; Miss BULLEST, contralto; Mr. ROMANER, tenor; Mr. RUMBRETE, bass, assisted by other voices, the whole under the direction of Mr. DODGE, organist, assisted by Mr. BAROCCK.

ST. TAMES' CHURCH.

The interior of St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church, in East Seventy-second-street, of which Rev. C. B. SMITH is rector and superintendent, has been beautifully decorated. On Christmas morning there will be a children's carol, and on Tuesday evening there will be a Christmas tree festival for the children connected with the Sunday-school.

HOLY TRINITY OF HARLEM.

At the Holy Trinity Church, Harlem, of which Rev. W. NELSON MCVICKAR is rector, services will commence at 10½ A. M. The musical service will include a pastoral symphony on the organ, "There Were Shepherds," (solo from the Messiah,) chorus, "Glory to God;" anthem, "Behold a Virgin," and chorus, "O Thou that Tellest," (from the Messiah;) hymn, "Hark, the Herald Angels;" the hallelujah chorus and hymn No. 149. In the grand chorus from the Messiah the choir will be assisted by a large number of ladies and gentlemen of the congregation, and others, who have volunteered their aid. The choir consists of Miss ROBINO FARRELL, soprano; Miss EMMA HUBIN, alto; Mr. W. H. TEMPLEMAN, tenor; Mr. R. R. ALMY, bass. Mr. GEO. F. BRISTOW is organist.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Extensive preparations have been made for Christmas at all the Roman Catholic churches. The Cathedral in Mulberry-street presents a really magnificent appearance, holly, mistletoe, laurel and other evergreens being used in its decoration. The services will, of course, commence with high mass, and will be closed by the Archbishop's pontifical service.

At St. Peter's, in Barclay-street, a beautiful cross of flowers has been placed over the tabernacle, and on the altar of the Blessed Virgin will appear a figure of the infant Christ lying in a manger. The entire edifice has been decorated with evergreens. High mass will be celebrated by Rev. Father QUINN.

CHRISTMAS MUSICAL FORTE.

The "Messiah" is to be sung in Newark on Christmas night, at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church. The oratorio will have the excellent support of Miss. ANNA DRNOP, assisted by Messrs. SIMPSON and THOMAS. No doubt the music-loving and devotional public of Newark will come out in force on this occasion. They will certainly enjoy a most worthy performance.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS, &C.

The poor and the unfortunate will not be forgotten today, and the warmth of Christian feeling will even penetrate through prison bars to the guilty. The inmates of Ludlow-street Jail will dine with the warden, who will spread at his own expense a fair long table covered with turkeys, venison, beef, pies, pudding, fruits and vegetables, with cigars and liquors. Mr. CONNOLLY will eat his Christmas fare in the same doleful place, if his declining health will permit him to eat anything. At the Five Points House of Industry the children will dine sumptuously at 1 o'clock. Turkeys and plum-pudding have been provided for them by some charitable hands who do good by stealth, and whose sole reward will be in the happiness of the children. The Emigrants' Refuge on Ward's Island, the Newsboys' Lodging-house, the Howard Mission and the Children's Aid Society, will all have sumptuous dinners for their inmates. In the various institutions of public charity the Commissioners have taken care that good Christmas fare shall not be lacking.

For the poor who have the brave spirit to refrain from public aid, whose bitter bread is too often moistened with tears, there have also been kindly thoughts and remembrance. The pastors of many of the City churches have made lists of their poor members, and obtained turkeys for them. Dr. OGILBY, of Trinity, supplied 200; Dr. MORAN, of St. Thomas, supplied 200 to the poor who live on the west side of town, within his spiritual bailiwick. Among his congregation, indeed, it would be difficult to find a poor man, for it is notorious the wealthiest and the most fashionable in the City. The rector of St. Bartholomew has also made provision for his poor, and has largely aided the institution of the Sheltering Arms. Dr. GALLAUDET, of St. Ann's, has kindly cared for the poor deaf mutes, to whom he has ever been as true a friend. In fact everywhere the clergy have been particularly active in securing food and fuel for those who would otherwise have gnawed hard crusts and lifted tearful eyes of sorrowful complaining to the Almighty. The Hoboken Ferry Company has distributed turkeys to its employes, and private merchants, with few exceptions, have done the same thing.

LADIES' UNION RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

Amid the numerous pleadings for remembrance and aid, which press from every quarter of our great City, at this season of gladness and general rejoicing, let it not be forgotten that the ladies of the Union Relief Association are still caring for the disabled soldiers and the widows and orphans of those who fell in the late war, and that unless prompt and generous assistance be given them they will be obliged at this time of national severity to turn helplessly away from the two hundred pensioners to whom they have already given relief. But the ladies feel confident that this cause which appeals so peculiarly to our people in their hour of happiness and prosperity, will not fail to receive the support it so richly deserves, and that, through the bounty of our generous and patriotic citizens, many straitened homes of sorrowing ones shall be gladdened, and many friendless little children and lonely widows be made partakers with those of happier lot in the blessed joys of the merry Christmas tide. The ladies of the United Relief also will be in attendance at the Twelfth-second Regiment Armory, Fourteenth-street, west of Sixth avenue, on Wednesday, Dec. 27, from 10 A. M., where donations will be thankfully received and promptly acknowledged.

PUBLIC OFFICES.

The Custom-house will be open for the transaction of important business, from 9 to 11 A. M. today, and the Post-office will be open early in the morning, closing at 10 A. M. The Appraiser's Department, Church-street, and the Sub-Treasury will both be closed.

Christmas Among the Germans.

Among the Germans Sunday was a busy day in making the final arrangements for Christmas Eve, which is the German family and children's festival. A feature of this is always the brilliantly illuminated Christmas tree, decorated with toys, confectionery and holiday gifts for the young. As the weather was delightful yesterday the principal thoroughfares on the east side, the Bowery, Division, Grand and Houston streets, and the avenues were crowded with persons, patronizing the shops where holiday goods were presented, which yesterday were kept open for the occasion. The places of amusement in the Bowery, the beer saloons and other public places, were almost everywhere decorated with Christmas trees, and many of these places were illuminated in the evening. The German churches, which were largely attended, were also tastefully adorned with Christmas trees, flowers and evergreens. Today the Christmas festivities among the Germans will assume a more public character. The numerous German vocal and musical societies and the Turner and Schwoerer organizations, have arranged special festivities at their head-quarters, including soirées, balls, the distribution of Christmas gifts, &c.

The New-York Maennerchor will give a soirée and ball this evening at the Club-house of the Lieder Verein, Forty-first-street and Third-avenue. The Beethoven Maennerchor will give a children's Christmas festival at its Club-house in Fifteenth-street, this afternoon, which will be followed by a ball.

The Turnverein of the west side will engage in Christmas festivities at the Turn Hall in Spring-street, which will include a drawing for Christmas gifts. The Swabian Saengerbund will give a Christmas soirée in the Walhalla in Orchard-street, which will also include a distribution of Christmas gifts. The Liederkranz will engage in Christmas festivities at their Hall on Fourth-street, to-morrow, comprising, among other entertainments, a children's festival and distribution of Christmas gifts in the afternoon.

The Rothschmerer Dramatic Society gave a highly entertaining dramatic entertainment last evening, which was followed by a ball, and at the Harmonie Rooms in Essex-street the Germania Maennerchor was engaged in a ball last night, which was well patronized.

Christmas Sermon by Rev. E. H. Chapin.

The Church of the Divine Paternity, corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, was crowded to overflowing, yesterday morning, to hear the eloquent Dr. CHAPIN on an occasion which would be certain to draw from him his best effort—a Christmas sermon. Long before the opening hymn was sung, the aisles were crowded, and many were unable to obtain even standing room. Dr. CHAPIN selected his text from the first chapter of St. John, eighth verse, and began his discourse by drawing eloquent comparison between John the Baptist and the Savior. John was one sent before to prepare a way for the coming of the Redeemer. John was solitary. Jesus mingled with men. John with restless energy attacked the depravity of man and appealed them in their sin. Jesus blended benignity and sovereignty. Yet John came with an inspired mission to bear witness of the coming Light. The pastor then spoke of those who find in nature all the light they seek, and said that the sacredness of nature, or its holy office, could not be overestimated. Yet nature, with its harmonious laws, does not minister to that deep want implanted in every human heart. Lofty intellects might build up with cold and logical reasoning a shelter for their trust, yet after all nature is a broken reed, a hanging on the wind, a mere nude. Ah, there is something in man that only nature's God can satisfy. Willithat poor creature, stung with remorse, craving pardon, burdened with sorrow and seeking inward peace, be satisfied with the sight of the starlit dome of Nature or the breath of the night wind? The mother in her hour of agony needs something more than the cold reasonings of Nature, or the cold teachings of philosophy, when her dead child lies within her arms. She needs a light within her heart that will strengthen it in hope and faith of a life beyond the grave. Nature is not that light. Nature is not that mother's light. Nature testifies to Christianity by its very inconsistencies. It leads the human mind just far enough to want something more than it can give. If man lived the life of an animal, there would be no thought beyond the present. Nature is full of suggestions and the gospel of Christ meets these suggestions. Before the era of Christianity, nature stood like some great cathedral in the moonlight, cold, glittering and silent, and it only awoke when daylight came streaming through its windows, revealing its multitudes worshiping at its altar, and its texts written on the walls. Almost everybody admits Christ to have been a great teacher, and men have appeared from time to time who have seemed to be inspired of God. A great deal of lofty truth came from SOCRATES, ZOROASTER and PLATO. All, perhaps, were bright and particular stars in their own quarter, yet none could be called that great central Light at which to Jesus. The world had heard the tinkling of the bells, horses and chariots before Jesus came. They lay there like so many bones and fossils. Jesus came and breathed upon those bones and they rattled. The hard, dry, cold teachings became utterances that touched the human heart and thrilled it. None, however, possessed that comprehensive humanity embraced in the life of Jesus. It was something more than the blossoming of a mere human life. It was a life that was something more than cold teaching, for that word has illumined the hovels of the poor and has soothed the pillow of the dying. Dr. CHAPIN here touched upon the thoughts often expressed in the words that education and science tended to soar above the teachings of Christ, and declared that the more an earnest man became truly educated and refined the more he leaned on Christianity. The moral sense of man craves light, but it is the true light which streams from the cross of Christ. The eloquent pastor closed his sermon with an appeal to the congregation to open their hearts to the poor and the needy, and to make the season of "Merry Christmas" something more than a conventional period, to gather about them the testimonies of the Redeemer, to do good as He did, and in their lives bear witness to that light which came with healing on its wings.

Christmas Sermon by Rev. Dr. Thompson, of Chicago.

An Advent sermon was preached, yesterday morning, at Christ Church, by Rev. Dr. THOMPSON, of Chicago, who took for his text these words: "Watch ye, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh." The preacher said: The drama of this world seems at times to have no ending. If we look back on the story of the past, on the human suffering that has been endured, on the rise of nations, on the fall of empires and dynasties, we shall be able to trace the fact that human efforts have had but a limited and transitory success, and have sooner or later been engulfed by irredeemable failure. Yet all Christians have a conviction that our many failures have been ordained for some wise purpose, and that there is a beautiful divine philosophy which governs human life. But it is to-morrow that the Church solves the great problem of Christian philosophy. If we look back for centuries we shall see how God prepared the world for the first coming of Heaven; how that previous to his coming prosperity was the lot of some nations, while others were held in subjection and suffering, but still the universal and continual cry to heaven was—"Thy Kingdom Come."

Christmas Services in Brooklyn.

In many of the Unitarian churches and in some of those of the Episcopal denomination, special services were held last evening. In the Church of the Savior, on Pierrepont-street, Rev. A. J. PUTNAM preached in the evening, and the full musical Christmas service was rendered by the choir. At St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Flatbush, Bishop LITTLEJOHN preached in the evening. The churches are elaborately decorated with evergreens, and the usual Christmas tree is laden with gifts for the Sunday-school children. The services today will commence at St. Paul's Episcopal church at 10½ o'clock, and in many of them the musical portion will be very fine, extraordinary preparations having been made. At St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, HAYDE'S Imperial Mass will be sung, assisted by a chorus of twenty-four voices from the New-York Church Music Association. MOZART'S Twelfth Mass will be sung at the Church of St. Charles Borromeo, (Roman Catholic,) assisted by a full chorus and orchestra engaged for the occasion.

Christmas in New-Jersey.

The day will be observed throughout New-Jersey by a general cessation of business, by the usual services in the churches, the accustomed festivities in homes, and such dinners, dances, and other social gatherings as the capacity of assembly rooms in the various cities and villages will warrant. Yesterday the services in the churches were of the usual character, except that last evening the musical exercises were more varied and ambitious. But in the Catholic churches held midnight mass, Bishop BAYLEY having counselled the decorations of the practice. In the Episcopal churches in Jersey City today, the choirs will sing from MOZART'S Twelfth Mass. In St. Mark's Church, the "Processional" will be one of the features of the service. In the Newark Catholic Cathedral, some statuary will be unveiled.

CHRISTMAS EVE.

A Quiet Time Generally—German Festivities.

The evening before Christmas has been an occasion of rejoicing hardly less important than Christmas Day itself. In mediæval times, indeed, it was pre-eminently the festival, and was honored with many special games, with extraordinary beverages and all kinds of fantastic customs. It was known as Yule, and the bringing home of the huge mass of wood called the Yule log, was a most important affair. The boar's head was served with special garnishing and the cups were filled with rich spiced and sweet mediglin for those who had dainty palates and with sweet brown ale for the hearty yeomen and knightly drinkers of the days of old. Then was the mistletoe bough, a solemn institution, which no maiden would scorn, and no young man would neglect. The fact that this year Christmas Eve fell upon Sunday rather damped the usual festivities among the American families of the City, but among the Germans that made no difference, and the Christmas tree reared its stately head and spread its gift-laden branches as if the day had not been consecrated to the service of the Lord. The stores on the Bowery were also open, and the shooting-rooms, where Tenton sportsmen aim at targets of fantastic shapes for three cents a shot, did a great business. The stores on Holiday-street were also open, and were thronged with eager purchasers.

THE NEWSBOYS' CHRISTMAS EVE.

The Irvington-street Lodging-house has the reputation among the newsboys of doing up things in grand style about Christmas and New-Year's times, and so the institution is filled at present to its utmost capacity.

The Christmas services last night were exceedingly interesting, and participated in by the boys with much earnestness and decorum.

The exercises were conducted by EDWARD POTTER and JOHN CROSBY BROWN, Esqs., who gave the boys some valuable instruction regarding the joyful day, and showed them that all our blessings and dearest hopes spring from the Babe of Bethlehem. The singing, in which the boys heartily joined, was ably conducted by Miss PHILLIPS and Mr. M. DUPUY.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 25—1 A. M.—The barometer has risen since Saturday night throughout the Atlantic States and on the lower lakes, and clear and partially cloudy weather has prevailed during Sunday east of the Mississippi, but threatening weather is now reported from Lakes Erie and Michigan, attending upon a small area of low pressure, which has advanced north-eastward to Lake Huron. Rising barometer and clear weather, with falling temperature, is reported from the North-western States. Clear weather and light winds on the Gulf coast. No reports have been received from the Pacific stations.

PROBABILITIES.

Clear and mild weather is probable for Monday throughout the Gulf, Southern and Middle states, while an barometer on the lower lakes move north eastward, and the cloudy weather in New-York and New-England very generally clear away during the day; rising barometer and clear, cold weather prevail from Missouri to Michigan and north-westward.

Dangerous winds are not anticipated for to-night.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

BRIGHAM YOUNG is expected at Salt Lake next week.

The Potomac River is now open to navigation to Aquia Creek.

There was a heavy southerly gale, with rain, on Saturday night, at Halifax.

A heavy gale visited Buffalo on Saturday night, doing considerable damage to buildings.

The warm south wind and rain of Saturday cleared the ground at Buffalo entirely of snow.

The Health Officer of Philadelphia reports 226 deaths from small-pox for the week. This is a slight increase over last week.

The late snow-storm in the West was very severe, and extended through the mountains to the Pacific coast.

A London dispatch dated noon, yesterday, says: The Prince of WALES passed a quiet night. He is gradually regaining his strength.

The Chicago Police think they have the clue to a Rosenwald-Bowlsby case. They regard it of such importance as to maintain secrecy as to the facts.

CHARLES CROUSE, convicted a year ago of murder in the second degree, in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, and sentenced to eleven years' confinement, hanged himself in jail yesterday.

The Robinson murder examination at Salt Lake closed on Saturday afternoon. HAMPTON, TOMS and BLYTHE were committed to await the action of the Grand Jury, and the others were discharged.

The snow is ten feet deep on a level in Little Cotton-wood mining district, Utah, and it is still snowing. Freighting ore from the mines is nearly suspended. The sun has not been seen for a week.

By the explosion of the railway locomotive "Baltic," on Saturday, in Northfield, Conn., only the engineer, E. S. COLLINS, formerly of Pittsfield, Mass., was killed. The fireman, VOGHT, was not killed, as first reported, though he was severely injured.

The steamer Alpha returned to Halifax, N. S., on Thursday night, from St. Thomas, bringing back passengers and freight. In consequence of a report that the cholera prevailed at Halifax, the St. Thomas authorities refused to allow them to land.

The gale on Saturday at Toledo, Ohio, was one of the most severe ever experienced in that locality. The telegraph lines were prostrated and considerable damage was done to roofs. The spire of the First Baptist Church was blown down, falling upon and partially crushing an adjoining dwelling.

A very heavy gale swept over Springfield, Ill., on Saturday. It blew down an immense skating rink and the new rolling-mills of the Springfield Iron Company, and entirely destroyed the round-house of the Gilman, Clinton and Springfield Railroad, besides tearing off several roofs, toppling over chimneys, levelling fences, &c. The loss cannot be less than $50,000.

A violent wind-storm prevailed in Indiana all Saturday afternoon, doing considerable damage to buildings in Indianapolis. A portion of the roof of St. John's Cathedral was crushed by the falling of the upper part of one of the front towers. At Lafayette, a large number of buildings were unroofed, including the Second National Bank building, Post-office, and telegraph buildings. Several persons were injured.

THE KUKLUX TRIALS.

Present State of the Cases in the United States Court at Columbia, South Carolina.

From the Columbia Phœnix, Dec. 22.

Messrs. JOHNSON and STANBERY, having done their work, will leave our city today. On two questions which were raised by Messrs. JOHNSON and STANBERY, the Judges of the Court—Judge BOND and Judge BRYAN—stood opposed in opinion. The first and most important one is: Whether the Court has jurisdiction under the act of 1870 to try not only conspiracies against the right of suffrage, and to punish them, according to the provisions of that act, with fine and imprisonment provided in case of such conspiracies, but whether, as provided in the act, they can also try persons accused for any other felony, and punish them for such other felony with the penalties of punishment provided for such offenses by the laws of South Carolina. In many of the cases the parties charged with the conspiracy against the suffrage were also charged with other offenses, such as burglary and murder, committed at the same time, but independent of and not in furtherance of the conspiracy itself. The question whether that section of the act which authorizes such jurisdiction is constitutional, has been certified on a division of opinion to the Supreme Court of the United States for its decision.

The other question, which has likewise been certified to the Supreme Court on a division of opinion, arises upon indictments in which conspirators are charged against the right to keep and bear arms, and the question there is: Whether jurisdiction to try a conspiracy against the exercise of that right is vested in the Courts of the United States.

Of the two questions so certified, the first is, in all respects, the most grave and important. If it had happened that the Judges had been united in the opinion that they had jurisdiction to try the cases of murder, as to which numerous parties stand charged, then nothing would have been left to them but to be satisfied in the consciousness of such a verdict as might have been rendered against them.

There are yet one or two questions, raised by Messrs. JOHNSON and STANBERY, on which the opinion of the Court has not yet been delivered. One relates to the right of peremptory challenge, and the other, and the most important of the two, is the question of the right of the parties convicted of conspiracy against the suffrage are to be punished. Messrs. JOHNSON and STANBERY claim that the punishment for that offense is fixed by the fourth section of the act as a misdemeanor, for which the imprisonment cannot exceed one year in while, on the other hand, the Government is of opinion that the imprisonment is fixed by the sixth section of the act as a felony, and in which the term of imprisonment may extend to ten years. We shall await anxiously to hear whether, upon these points, the Judges are united or divided in opinion.

It is proper to add that the only mode in which any question can be brought from the Circuit to the Supreme Court of the United States, is upon a division of opinion between the Judges. That is the rule in all criminal cases, for in such cases no appeal or writ of error can be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States.

We understand that the questions which have been or may be certified to the Supreme Court will be decided by that tribunal at an early day of the present term of that Court, and that Messrs. JOHNSON and STANBERY will repair to Washington to argue them before that tribunal. In the meantime, further proceedings in all those cases involving the disputed questions will be suspended until the decision of the Supreme Court is announced.

Another Verdict of Guilty.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 24.—In the United States Court, yesterday, the jury, in the case of MITCHELL and WHITSONS, after nearly twenty-four hours' consultation, returned a verdict of guilty on the second and fourth counts. The defense moved for a new trial. The Court then took a recess till Wednesday next.

Railroad Accident—Narrow Escape.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—The steam-boat train on the Hartford and Erie Railroad met with a serious accident this afternoon. The train was thirteen hours late owing to the storm. When near East Douglass the engine struck a large rock which had been washed on to the centre of the track, breaking the cow-catcher in two, breaking the axle of the tender, and smashing every brake of the train. The train consisted of a baggage car, smoking and passenger car, which fortunately was not thrown from the track. Where the accident happened the embankment was full thirty feet high, and if the train had gone off serious loss of life would probably have resulted. A new train was made up at Blackstone, arriving at Boston at 7½ in the evening.

Suicide of a Wisconsin Sheriff in St. Louis—A Curious Letter.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 23.—A man named M. B. PIERCE, who, it seems, was a Sheriff of Fon du Lac County, Wisconsin, was found dead in his bedroom at the Union Hotel here today, with a pistol-shot wound in his left breast, and a pistol lying on the floor. A letter to the landlady of the hotel says: "Do as you please with my remains, but my wish is that you take my effects, and by their sale realize enough to get me covered up under snow and frost. My effects will cancel all expenditures, for all I want is a box and hole. I am Sheriff of Fon du Lac County, Wisconsin, and want to be buried before you communicate with my friends. My reason for doing this is the business of nobody but myself." Another letter addressed to his deputy, ROBERT COSGROVE, desires the latter to settle his affairs as best he can, and to do all for his "wife and babies" possible. A letter from his wife refers to, some matters from which it is inferred that PIERCE was in pecuniary trouble, in consequence of which he may have left home. He had been here since the 9th inst. Only sixty cents were found among his effects.

Lynching of Desperadoes in Missouri—One Confesses the Murder of Eleven Men.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 24.—Further particulars have been received of the lynching of two desperadoes near Seneca, Neosho County, Mo. Last week it appears LOUIS SWINK and another desperado, known as Texas JOE, alias Buckskin, induced a German named HENRY SALEMAN to go about two miles from Prairie City to get some whisky they had secreted. After getting out of the town they assaulted him with clubs, and left him for dead, after robbing him of $25 and a watch. SALEMAN recovered sufficiently to crawl back to the town, and reported the affair. SWINK was arrested at Seneca, by the Vigilance Committee. BUCKSKIN was subsequently captured after being shot three times. Both were hanged to a tree. Before the execution BUCKSKIN confessed to having murdered eleven men during the past year, and the total booty obtained was only $60.

Archbishop McCloskey Not Made Cardinal.

Archbishop MCCLOSKEY, yesterday expressed his surprise at the dispatch from Rome which appeared in yesterday morning's papers to the effect that at a recent consistory held in that city he had been elevated to the Cardinalate. He said that there is not the slightest foundation for the statement, and that there is no truth whatever in it.

Marine Disaster—Seamen Badly Frozen.

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 24.—The schooner Sparkle, Smith, from Dennisville, for New-York, arrived here to-night, bringing the crew of the schooner Fanny E. Rogers, of Boston, who were taken off twenty-five miles north-east of Cape Cod on the morning of the 22d—the vessel having filled with water on the 21st. The mate and cook were badly frozen.

A Reformed Democrat and his Guests Poisoned in Kentucky.

Mr. B. WILDER writes from Whitley Court-house, Kentucky, to the Louisville Commercial as follows, under date of Dec. 12:

"A very sad calamity befell our quiet little town a few days since. PLEASANT KERNS, an old citizen of Democratic proclivities, after the exposé of the New-York swindle and the defeat of the Democracy in that state, gave a dinner, and invited several of his Republican friends to dine with him and talk over the past—but all past differences over politics, avowing his purpose to bury them with the dead. After a very pleasant conversation, in which the past was talked over and the future discussed, the party sat down to a sumptuous dinner. Before the dinner was over Mr. KERNS was quite sick. The family physician was sent for, who, upon examination, found Mr. KERNS was poisoned. All the antidotes and skill of the physicians were used, but without avail. Mr. KERNS died at six o'clock P. M. Both his sons-in-law, B. THOMAS and Dr. DUNMAN were supposed to be poisoned, and both died soon. Dunman died yesterday. Our citizens are deeply saddened in the unexpected bereavement, and earnest at the perpetrators of the act that caused it. Various persons have been suspected as the guilty party, but it is more conjectural, as no certain clue to the murder can be had, and no arrests have been made.

THE GRAND DUKE.

The Royal Party at the Falls of Niagara—Movements Since Sunday Visitation.

From the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, Dec. 22.

At 4 o'clock yesterday, the Prince and suite arrived at the Great Western Railway Depot at Suspension Bridge, and were met by Mayor F. J. Fearon, at Clifton, Hon. T. C. Sweny, and Col. Sidney Barrett, commanding the Forty-fourth Battalion, Canadian Volunteers, numbering 100 men. A brief address of welcome was extended by Mayor Fearon, and an answer delivered made by the Prince. The party then boarded the carriages in waiting and were driven rapidly up the Canadian side of the river to Col. Barrett's Embassy. The first stage was drawn by four horses, and mounted the Imperial Arms, Admiral Prince Alfred, Ministers CARTWRIGHT and Col. BARRETT. Alighting, the visitors proceeded at once to a private parlor to the museum for the purpose of preparing for a trip under the Falls.

It was indeed a pleasant sight to witness the cordial kind feeling existing between the soldiers of the royal party, in second more like a group of jolly comrades. The Prince ALFRED is indeed a princely looking man, and impresses and most favorably. Standing over six feet in height of rather massive build, and with a cheerful, smiling, and yet sufficiently dignified face, he looks like one fitted for he is—a Prince among his fellows." When the party had dressed in the unique looking costumes needed in their proposed trip under the cataract, and were engaged in "jabbering" their native jargon with foreign volubility, the mirthful American spectators were envious of the picture. Any one who has ever seen a party of Frenchmen by the ear fully appreciated the same and imagine how heartily hooted on the occasion in question. The Prince appeared to enjoy the sort of thing immensely, and even with our rather slim knowledge of the Russian tongue we could understand that considerable "chaffing" was passed between the royal young men among the party. When all was in readiness the party left the Museum and descended the steps down the river's banks and disappeared under the Falls. Of course the trip was enjoyed, and the real greatness of the scene was appreciated. Upon returning to the Museum a visit was made over the building and the curiosities there to be found were examined. The members of the Buffalo Club Committee were introduced to ALFRED and extended to persons the invitation that had been given and accepted by telegraph. The Prince acknowledged the courtesies in a very pleasant and earnest manner. The party were then driven to the new Suspension Bridge.

QUEEN VICTORIA TO ALFRED.

According to a special dispatch to ALFRED and party were on their way from Toronto to Suspension Bridge, in a train stopped for a few minutes at Hamilton. As the Prince stepped into Hamilton station a lengthy dispatch was handed to him from Queen VICTORIA, announcing the intelligence of the progressing convalescence and probable recovery of the Prince of WALES. The Grand Duke was highly delighted at this piece of courtesy on the part of the Queen, and immediately wrote a reply, thanking the royal sender, and earnestly desiring that her wishes in respect to the Prince's recovery might be speedily realized.

ON THE AMERICAN SIDE.

The Prince and party walked over the bridge, stopping at frequent intervals to enjoy the scene. Soon the Spencer House was reached, and the handsome rooms in waiting were occupied. The truly American element of cosmopolitanism was shown in the cheering given the Prince along the route from the bridge to the hotel. The halls were filled with an assemblage of people interested to see the royal guest. About 4 o'clock the Board of Trustees of the village were presented to the Prince ALFRED and suite by Ex-Minister CATACAZY. Mr. D. J. Townsend, President of the Board, addressed the Prince in the following well-chosen words: "Your Imperial Highness: These gentlemen, constituting with myself the municipal government of the village, are present to tender in behalf of all our people to your Highness a hearty and sincere welcome to Niagara Falls. Except our own great natural wonder and its surroundings, we have little in which we can expect your Highness to take an interest, save the assurance of our lively regard for all that relates to the welfare of Russia, and an earnest hope that on your return to the banks of the Neva (which, God grant, may be in health and safety,) you may be able to take some substantial evidence of the good feelings of our countrymen for the great Empire you now represent, and of the esteem and admiration for its humane and illustrious chief." The Prince replied very graciously, thanks that any such complimentary words should exist with the cordiality exhibited. He thanked the trustees for the courtesy shown, and stated that as the party were fatigued the absence of a formal reception was rather gratifying than otherwise. He would be pleased to visit the American side of the Falls next day. Elegant conversation ensued, and the trustees then withdrew.

Shortly after, the delegation from Milwaukee, consisting of Messrs. HARRISON LUDINGTON, JEREMIAH CURRIE, J. M. BEAN and AUGUSTUS GAYLORD, paid their respects to the Prince, and tendered to him the welcome of their city. The invitation was accepted, and the time fixed for the visit was from Jan. 4 to the 6th, inclusive. Mr. BEAN, who was Secretary of the Legation at St. Petersburg under CASSIUS M. CLAY, addressed the Prince in the Russian language, which seemed to please the party highly. Dinner was served at 6 o'clock, and the really superior bill of fare proved well relished

NEW-YORK GOVERNMENT.

What is Proposed by the Committee of Seventy.

Draft of a Charter to be Considered by the Legislature.

Patronage Emasculated—Centralization of Power to be Broken Up.

The following draft of a new charter for the City of New-York, was exclusively published in yesterday's TIMES. It has been prepared by the Committee of Seventy, who intend to submit it to the new Legislature for consideration. The scheme thus embodied is fully indorsed by the Committee, and will no doubt be read with great interest, as an embodiment of the spirit of Reform. Copies, it is understood, have been sent to every Senator and Assemblyman elect for perusal in advance:

AN ACT

TO REORGANIZE THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

ARTICLE I.

THE CORPORATE POWERS.

SECTION 1. The Corporation now existing and known by the name of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York shall continue to be a body corporate and politic in fact and in name, by the same name, and shall have perpetual succession, with all the grants, powers, and privileges heretofore held by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New-York, and not modified or repealed by the provisions hereinafter made by this act.

ARTICLE II.

LEGISLATIVE POWER.

SEC. 2. The legislative power of the said Corporation shall be vested in a Board of Aldermen, which shall consist of one more than forty-five members, one fifth to be elected as hereinafter provided in each Senate district of the City, as now established by law. [A provision is made for legislating out of office the present Board, as that will probably be established by a special act early in the session.]

SEC. 3. There shall be Aldermen elected at an election to be held under this act on the second Tuesday of April in the year 1872, and on the second Tuesday of the same month in every year thereafter, to hold office for the term of one year from the first Monday of May next succeeding each and every such election.

For details as to manner of holding elections and election officers, &c., reference will be here made to general Registry and Election laws now existing, or to be passed by the Legislature of 1872.

SEC. 4. At such election each qualified voter in each Senate district may give not more than nine ballots, upon each of which shall be printed or written the name of one candidate for Alderman. The voter may give the whole of his ballots for one and the same candidate, or may distribute them between nine different candidates or a less number, in such proportion as he may see fit. After the closing of the polls on the day of election, the canvass in each election district of the senate district shall be completed by ascertaining, asserting, and making returns to the county canvassers of the number of ballots given for each candidate. From the returns so made the county canvassers shall determine the names of the nine persons having the largest number of votes in the Senate district, and they shall be returned as elected. In the event of a vacancy or vacancies arising by reason of less than nine persons being voted for in any Senate district, such vacancy or vacancies shall remain unfilled for the ensuing year. In the event of two or more of the persons voted for in any Senate district having received an equal number of votes, under such circumstances there shall be no full number of nine Aldermen having received the highest number of votes, the Aldermen elected at such election shall, within five days after their organization, select and determine, by lot, four among the said persons so having received an equal number of votes, a number sufficient to make up the full delegation of nine members from each Senate district, and the persons so selected shall be deemed elected.

SEC. 5. In case of vacancies by deaths or resignations, amounting in the whole to one-fourth of the entire Board, occurring before the 1st of February in any year, the said vacancies shall be filled by new elections to be held in the respective Senate district, or districts in which the vacancies shall have occurred, at a time to be appointed by the Board of Aldermen, which elections shall be held in the manner and on the principle prescribed in section 4, so far as the same are applicable.

SEC. 6. A majority of the Board of Aldermen shall be a quorum.

SEC. 7. said Board shall: 1. Choose a President from the Aldermen elect, members by a majority of the members elected; 2. Appoint all such other officers; 3. Determine the rules of its own proceedings; 4. Be the judge of the returns of elections and the right of election and qualifications of its own members; 5. Keep a journal of its proceedings; 6. Sit with open doors, except when the public welfare shall require secrecy; and 7. Shall have the power to compel the attendance of absent members in such manner, and under such penalties for disorderly behavior, and to expel a member with the concurrence of four-fifths of the members elected to the Board.

SEC. 8. The first meeting of the Board shall be held on the 1st Monday in May after the election, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and at such meeting the Board shall prescribe the days and hours for its stated meetings, provided, that the hour for opening stated or adjourned meetings shall be fixed between the hours of 8 and 6 in the evening.

SEC. 9. Every legislative act of the Board shall be by resolution or ordinance, and every ordinance or resolution, except those specially excepted, shall, before it takes effect, be presented, duly certified, to the Mayor for his approval. Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to the acts of the Board in appointing or electing commissioners or heads of departments.

SEC. 10. The Mayor shall sign the same if he approve it, or return the same within ten days, if he does not approve it, with the reason therefor, and if thereupon the Board pass the same within five days of such veto, by a majority of two-thirds of all the members elected, it shall become a law, though the Mayor had vetoed the same. It shall also become effective if he should neglect to return the same within such ten days.

SEC. 11. No resolution or ordinance for alienating or leasing any property of the City, or which involves the appropriation of public money, or imposing or assessing the citizens of this City, shall be passed or adopted, unless at least two days after the same shall have been introduced and entered upon the journal, nor shall any such ordinance or resolution be passed or adopted unless by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected. Nor shall which said two-thirds shall constitute less than a majority of the members elected. No additional allowance, or any legal claim which exists under any contract with the Corporation, or for any services to the Corporation, or of any services to the Board or any of its Committees, shall be paid, except by an unanimous vote of all the members elected.

SEC. 12. No resolution or ordinance appropriating any money, or giving any property of the City, or loaning the credit of the City to any private agency, or charitable institution or purpose, shall be passed or adopted, unless such appropriation, gift or loan, shall have been first reported upon favorably by the hereinafter created Board of Public Instruction, nor, unless the same shall receive the votes of two-thirds of the members elected, which said two-thirds shall constitute at least a majority of the members elected.

SEC. 13. The Clerk of the Board of Aldermen shall keep the seal of the City, and his signature shall be necessary to all leases, grants and other documents, as under existing laws.

SEC. 14. Immediately after adjournment the Clerk shall, avoiding all formal and technical details, prepare a brief abstract of all resolutions or ordinances introduced, and all recommendations of committees which propose or contemplate any specific improvement involving the appropriation of public moneys or the taxing or assessing the property of the citizens of the City. Such abstract shall be published in document form, together with the abstract of the reports of the Departments hereinafter provided for, which publication shall be known as the "City Record," and a file of which shall be kept in every Department of the City Government. Such publication shall be a sufficient compliance with any law requiring a publication of the proceedings of the Board of Aldermen.

SEC. 15. The Board shall have the exclusive power to appropriate money by proper ordinances for every branch and object of City expenditure, and no money shall be drawn from the City Treasury unless the same shall have been previously appropriated by the Board.

SEC. 16. The Board shall have power to make, modify, continue and repeal such ordinances, regulations and resolutions as may be necessary to carry into effect any and all of the powers now vested in or by this act conferred upon the Corporation, and shall have power to enforce obedience thereto and obedience thereof by ordaining penalties for each and every violation, in such sums as may be deemed expedient, not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 17. Except in anticipation of the revenues of the current year the said City shall not have authority to borrow any moneys whatever on the credit of the Corporation beyond the sums now authorized by law, unless such loan shall be authorized by a special act of the Legislature passed after application thereafter made by the Board of Aldermen or Mayor.

[Powers of assessment, street opening and widening, &c., &c., will be made the subject of a separate act.]

SEC. 18. Each Alderman shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars, payable monthly, subject to a deduction of ten dollars for each absent day of the Board, that he shall during the month, for any cause, have failed to attend.

[Section declaring the Aldermen, Mayor and Controller to be Supervisors must be a separate act, on account of the constitutional provision as to title, and because City charter should not provide for County officers.]

ARTICLE III.

THE EXECUTIVE POWER.

SEC. 19. The executive power of the Corporation shall be vested in the Mayor and the Departments herein stated.

SEC. 20. The Mayor shall be the chief executive officer of the Corporation; shall be elected at the election to be held on the second Tuesday in April in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-two.

[No provision is made for legislating present incumbents out of office for reasons above stated as to Boards of Aldermen.]

SEC. 21. Whenever the Mayor shall, from any cause whatever, be prevented from attending to the duties of his office, the President of the Board of Aldermen shall be called as Mayor, and shall exercise all rights and powers of Mayor. But it shall not be lawful for the President of the Board of Aldermen, when so acting as Mayor, to sign or approve any ordinance or resolution of the Board of Aldermen, unless the sickness, disability, or absence of the Mayor shall have continued at least ten days.

SEC. 22. Whenever a vacancy in the office of Mayor shall take place before the 30th day of October of any year, the Board of Aldermen shall order forthwith a new election for the office of Mayor, to be held at the then next general election for State or Federal officers. Until such vacancy is filled, the Board of Aldermen shall elect a Mayor, who shall hold office for the ad interim term. And they shall in like manner have power to elect a Mayor to hold for the unexpired term, when the vacancy in the office of Mayor takes place after the 30th day of October in any year.

SEC. 23. It shall be the duty of the Mayor: 1. To communicate to the Board of Aldermen at least once in six months, a general statement of the finances, government and improvements of the City. 2. To recommend to the Board of Aldermen all such measures connected with the security, health, cleanliness and ornament of the City, as the protection and improvement of its Government and finances, may, he shall deem expedient. 3. To be vigilant and active in causing the ordinances of the City and laws of the State to be executed and enforced, and for that purpose may call together for consultation and cooperation any Commissioners or other City officers. 4. To attend meetings of the Board of Aldermen when he shall deem it expedient to do so. 5. Generally to perform all such duties as may be prescribed for him by City ordinances and laws of the State, and the Mayor shall be responsible for the good order and efficient government of the City.

SEC. 24. The Mayor may appoint such experts, clerks and other officers as he may require to aid him in the discharge of his official duties, and such Commissioners of Departments and other officers of Departments as are hereinafter provided to be appointed by him.

SEC. 25. The Mayor shall receive an annual salary of $15,000. [Provision also to be made for an allowance to the Mayor to pay personal staff of experts, clerks, &c., for which he shall account.]

SEC. 27. The Mayor may be removed by the Governor for cause, in the manner provided by law in the case of Sheriffs.

ARTICLE IV.

OF THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

SEC. 28. There shall be the following other Departments in said City: Department of Public Works, Department of Public Parks, Department of Docks, Department of Public Charities and Correction, Department of Finance, Sinking Fund Commission, Department of Law, Department of Public Instruction, Department of Police, Department of Health, Department of Taxes. [To insert other Departments if most approved for by some metropolitan district plan or otherwise, should be here enumerated.]

SEC. 29. In every Department there shall be kept a record of all transactions, to be accessible to the public from 8 to 5 o'clock each day, and at the end of each day a brief abstract shall be made of the transactions awarded and made, for work of every description, a copy of which abstract shall be transmitted to the Clerk of the Board of Aldermen for insertion in the City record.

SEC. 30. The said Department shall, when called upon by the Mayor or Board of Aldermen, make to him or them, respectively, reports of such matters and concerning such time, and each of them, and furnish to him or them such information as he or they may demand within such time as he or they may direct. [Here insert a provision as to how the subordinate officers and employes of Departments shall be appointed, whether by the Commissioners or officers of Departments. Insert the provisions applicable to all the Departments, if there are any such.]

ARTICLE V.

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

SEC. 31. The Commissioners of the Department of Public Works shall be five in number, who shall be called "Commissioners of Public Works," and who shall be the chief officers of the Department. One of said five Commissioners shall be appointed by the Mayor, between the first and tenth days of May in each year. The remaining four Commissioners shall be elected by the Board of Aldermen within the same period. At such election the Aldermen shall give not more than four open ballots, upon each of which shall be printed or written the name of one candidate for the office of Commissioner, and each of which shall be signed by the member voting. Each Alderman may give the whole of his ballots for one and the same candidate, or may distribute them between four different candidates or a less number, in such proportion as he may see fit. The four persons having the largest number of votes shall be deemed elected. In the event of a failure to elect four Commissioners by reason of less than four persons having been voted for, or by reason of two or more of the persons voted for having received an equal number of votes under such circumstances that there shall be no full number of four persons having received the highest number of votes, a new election for four Commissioners shall forthwith be held in the same manner. The Commissioners so appointed and elected respectively shall hold office until their successors shall have been appointed or elected, unless removed as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 32. The Mayor may at any time remove the Commissioner appointed by him, and appoint another in his place, at his pleasure, and may remove any other Commissioner for cause, assigning his reasons to the Board of Aldermen, in which case the security of those members of the Board by whom the said Commissioner was chosen, shall proceed to elect another Commissioner in the place of the one so removed; and the Board of Aldermen may at any time remove all the four Commissioners by them elected, (but not any less number than the whole,) and elect four new Commissioners, in the manner provided in the last preceding section.

SEC. 33. Whenever the words "Chief Engineer of the Croton Aqueduct Board," or "President of the Croton Aqueduct Board," or "Street Commissioner," occur in any existing law, ordinance, resolution, contract or obligation, they shall be deemed to mean the aforesaid Commissioners of Public Works, and whenever in any law or in any ordinance or obligation of the Corporation the words "Street Department" or "Croton Aqueduct Board" occur, they shall be deemed and construed hereafter to mean the "Department of Public Works," and the Commissioner thereof.

SEC. 34. The said Department shall have all the powers and functions heretofore possessed by the Department of Public Works now existing, and such others as may be expressly conferred upon it by this act.

SEC. 35. [Here provides that the Department of Public Works shall have the powers, &c., of present Department of Buildings.] [Also here provide that the Department shall have the same control that the Department of Parks now has—of boulevards, streets and avenues above Central Park.]

SEC. 36. The said Department shall have cognizance and control:

1. Of all structures and property connected with the supply and distribution of Croton water. 2. Of regulating, grading, flagging, curbing, guttering, and lighting streets, roads, places and avenues. 3. Of the repairing and construction of public roads. 4. Of the care of public buildings. 5. Of the filling up of sunken lots. 6. Of public sewers and drainage. 7. Of street vaults. 8. Of paving, repaving, and repairing streets, and keeping the same clear. [Here provide for street-cleaning, if so determined.] 9. Of digging and constructing wells. [Insert also powers of Department of Public Buildings.]

SEC. 37. There shall be the following bureaus in this Department. [Here re-enact either section 42 of chapter 16 of 1870, or make such redistribution of bureaus as is deemed advisable.] [Also insert, if deemed proper, sections 1, 18 and 15 of chapter 326 of the laws of 1870.]

SEC. 38. The Commissioners shall, at the first meeting after their appointment and election as aforesaid, choose one of their own number for President, and another one of their number for Treasurer. [Provides for the attendance of one or more of the Commissioners at the meetings of the Board of Aldermen.]

SEC. 39. [Provides for salaries of President, Treasurer and Commissioners.]

ARTICLE VI.

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC PARKS.

SEC. 40. The Commissioners or chief officers of the Department of Public Parks shall be five in number, who shall be called "Commissioners of Public Parks." They shall be appointed and elected respectively in the manner hereinbefore provided and prescribed for the appointment and election of Commissioners of Public Works, and be subject to removal in like manner. All provisions of sections 31 and 32 of this act shall be applicable to the Commissioners of Public Parks.

SEC. 41. The Department of Public Parks shall control and manage all public parks and all buildings thereon, and public places, which are the reality of the City of New-York.

SEC. 42. [Here re-enact the general powers of the Department, as now existing, except as the same may be limited by the powers of the Department of Public Works.]

SEC. 43 and 44. [Here add sections same as 38 and 39, supra.]

ARTICLE VII.

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS.

SEC. 45. The Commissioners or chief officers of the Department of Public Docks shall be five in number, who shall be called "Commissioners of Docks." They shall be appointed and elected respectively in the manner hereinbefore provided and prescribed for the appointment and election of the Commissioners of Public Works, and be subject to removal in like manner. All the provisions of sections 31 and 32 of this act shall be applicable to the Commissioners of Public Docks.

SEC. 46. [Re-enact article 14, of chapter of 1870, section 99, &c., as far as applicable and desirable.]

SECS. 47 and 48. [Here add sections same as 38 and 39, supra.]

ARTICLE VIII.

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC CHARITIES AND CORRECTION.

SEC. 49. The heads or chief officers of the Department of Charities shall be five in number, who shall be called "Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction." They shall be appointed and elected respectively in the manner hereinbefore provided and prescribed for the appointment and election of the Commissioners of Public Works, and be subject to removal in like manner. All the provisions of sections 31 and 32 of this act as to election, appointment and removal, shall be applicable to the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction. Said Board shall possess all the powers and discharge all the duties now vested in the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction by special laws, and by the provisions of chapter 319 of the laws of 1860, and acts and parts of acts amendatory thereto, except as the same are modified or repealed by the provisions of this act.

SEC. 50. There shall be two bureaus in the Department, a Bureau of Charities and a Bureau of Correction. The Commissioners shall appoint a superintendent for each bureau. The Bureau of Charities shall have especial charge of all institutions, the inmates of which have not been committed for any offense against the laws. The Bureau of Correction of all other institutions; and the two classes of persons shall be kept apart. The Commissioners shall be as far as practicable, and the Commissioners shall invite all incorporated charitable or benevolent societies, including hospitals, to file with the Bureau of Charities a statement of the objects for which such societies were established, the class or persons to whom they extend relief, and the mode of relief adopted; also to report from time to time the means of their support, and the sources they derived, the names of persons relieved, and the amount of relief extended to them; and, in the case of hospitals or asylums, what number of additional inmates they can receive, and such other details as the Commissioners may deem advisable. Such information, when received, to be properly classified in books prepared for the purpose, with full and complete indexes as will enable the Superintendent of such bureau at any time to refer to such institutions which take charge of any particular class of persons or patients, and to ascertain what relief any applicant to such bureau has heretofore received from any institution. The Presidents of all charitable associations which report to the Bureau of Charities may constitute an advisory Board to such bureau, and any one or more of them may, at all times, have access to the books and institutions under the charge of such bureau, and submit to the Commissioners any suggestions, in writing, or complaints concerning the administration thereof.

SEC. 51. All applications for money, property or loan of the City, by any charitable, eleemosynary or charitable institution or purpose, shall be made to the Department, before the same can be acted upon by the Board of Aldermen. When such application shall have been filed in the office of the Secretary of this Department, the said Commissioners shall have power to visit the said institution or charity and examine and investigate its condition and purposes, and if, they determine adversely to such application, the power of said Commissioners to visit and examine the same shall then cease, and be determined. If, upon a report of this Department, such aid and support or any part thereof, to such private eleemosynary institution or charity shall be extended by the Board of Aldermen and accepted by such institution or charity, said Commissioners shall thereupon be a Board of Visitors of said institution or charity, with power to send to such institution persons awarded for treatment or care, free of charge to the City, such cases as in the discretion of the said Commissioners can be better treated therein than in the public charities of the City. If such aid shall consist of money or bond of credit, said powers of said Commissioners shall continue during the period for which said donation shall have been made. If such aid shall consist of the use, and care of property of the City, then such powers of said Commissioners shall be perpetual.

SECS. 52 and 53. [Here add sections same as 38 and 39, supra.]

ARTICLE IX.

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE.

SECTION 54. The chief officers of the Department of Finance shall be five in number. They shall be appointed and elected respectively, in the manner hereinbefore provided and prescribed for the appointment and election of Commissioners of Public Works, and be subject to removal in like manner. All the provisions of sections 31 and 32 of this act, as to appointments, elections and removals, shall be applicable to the chief officers of this Department.

SEC. 55. The chief officer, so as aforesaid appointed by the Mayor, shall be called the "Controller of the City and County of New-York." He shall be the President of the Department and City and County Treasurer. The four chief officers, so as aforesaid elected by the Board of Aldermen, shall be called "Commissioners of the City Treasury."

SEC. 56. [Powers: See article 5, chapter of 1870, as amended by chapter 574 of laws of 1871, and re-enact the same as far as desirable.]

SEC. 57. Full statements of the receipts and expenditures of all the Departments, giving names, dates, and objects of expenditure shall be laid before the Board of Finance each month by each Department to the Department of Finance. The Controller, or any one of said Commissioners of the Department of Finance, shall be empowered at any time to inspect, examine or copy any vouchers, records or papers in any of said Departments. From the statements so returned and other information, the Department of Finance shall publish monthly, in pamphlet form, a detailed statement of all the receipts and expenditures of the City and County during the preceding month. No bond, certificate of stock, or evidence of public debt to be issued by the City, shall be valid unless signed by the Mayor and Controller, and countersigned by five members of the Commissioners of the Public Treasury.

SEC. 58. Said four Commissioners of the Public Treasury shall perform all the duties and possess all the power heretofore performed and possessed by the Commissioners of Taxes, under existing laws. Said Commissioners of the Public Treasury shall keep duplicate books, one set of which shall be open and accessible to all times to all tax-paying citizens. [Provide for transfer of books, &c., &c., from Commissioners of Taxes to Commissioners of Public Treasury; also provide for legislating present Commissioners out of office.]

SEC. 59. [Abolish office of City Chamberlain.]

SEC. 60. There shall be a bureau in this Department for the collection of City revenues, which shall be charged with the collection of all City revenues arising from taxation, assessments, fines, rents, &c., the chief officer of which shall be the collector of City revenues, who shall be appointed by the Controller, and the Commissioners of the City Treasury. [Provide for salaries of Controller and Commissioners of Public Treasury; also, for their attendance at meetings of Board of Aldermen.]

ARTICLE X.

OF THE SINKING FUND COMMISSION.

SEC. 61. [Here provide for the manner of constituting and the powers of the Sinking Fund Commissioners.]

ARTICLE XI.

OF THE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SEC. 62. The chief officer of the Law Department shall be called the Corporation Counsel, and he shall be a member of the Bar of the State, who shall have resided, or had an office in the City of New-York at least ten years consecutively immediately prior to the time of his appointment, and shall be appointed by the Mayor between the first and tenth days of May in each year. The Mayor may remove him at pleasure, and appoint his successor.

SEC. 63. The said Corporation Counsel shall act as the legal adviser of all the Departments; and no attorney or counsel shall receive any compensation for any services rendered to any Department unless he shall have been employed by or with the consent of the Law Department, except as hereinafter provided; said Department shall semi-annually report to the Board of Aldermen the condition of all suits pending, the names of all attorneys and counsel employed, the fees paid to attorneys and counsel, all receipts of the office, and all other matters pertaining to the business of the Law Department.

SEC. 64. There shall be a bureau in this Department, the chief officer of which shall be called the Corporation Attorney; a bureau, the chief officer of which shall be called the Public Administrator; and a bureau, the chief officer of which shall be called the Attorney for Opening and Assessments.

SECS. 65 and 66. Provide for existing laws. [Provisions for salaries and for the Corporation Counsel attending the meetings of the Board of Aldermen if thought desirable.]

ARTICLE XII.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

SEC. 66. There shall be a Department of Public Instruction, which shall have the same powers and discharge the same duties which are now vested in the Department of Public Instruction by article 12, section 100, of chapter 555 of the laws of 1870, as amended by chapter 574 of the laws of 1871; and the members of which shall be elected as follows:

SEC. 67. At the election provided for by section 4 of this act, there shall be elected not more than fifty-five Commissioners, one-fifth to be elected in each Senate District of the City of New-York, as now established by law, to hold office for the period of — years.

SEC. 68. [A provision should be inserted for legislating out of office the present heads of Department of Public Instruction and Trustees.]

SEC. 69. At such election, each qualified voter may give not more than eleven ballots, upon each of which shall be printed or written the name of one candidate for Commissioner, and may give and distribute the same between eleven different candidates or a less number, in such proportion as he may see fit. After the closing of the polls on the day of election, the canvass in each election district of a Senate district shall be completed by ascertaining, asserting, and making returns to the county canvassers of the number of ballots given for each candidate. From the returns so made, the county canvassers shall determine the names of the eleven persons having the largest number of votes in each Senate district, and they shall be returned as elected. In the event of a vacancy or vacancies arising by reason of less than eleven persons being voted for in any Senate district, such vacancy or vacancies shall remain unfilled for the ensuing year. In the event of two or more of the persons voted for in any Senate district having received an equal number of votes, under such circumstances there shall be no full number of nine Aldermen having received the highest number of votes, the Aldermen elected at such election shall, within five days after their organization, select and determine, by lot, four among the said persons so having received an equal number of votes, a number sufficient to make up the full delegation of nine members from each Senate district, and the persons so selected shall be deemed elected.

SEC. 70. There shall be two bureaus in the Department, a Bureau of Charities and a Bureau of Correction. The Commissioners shall appoint a superintendent for each bureau. The Bureau of Charities shall have especial charge of all institutions, the inmates of which have not been committed for any offense against the laws. The Bureau of Correction of all other institutions; and the two classes of persons shall be kept apart. The Commissioners shall be as far as practicable, and the Commissioners shall invite all incorporated charitable or benevolent societies, including hospitals, to file with the Bureau of Charities a statement of the objects for which such societies were established, the class of persons to whom they extend relief, and the mode of relief adopted; also to report from time to time the means of their support, and the sources they derived, the names of persons relieved, and the amount of relief extended to them; and, in the case of hospitals or asylums, what number of additional inmates they can receive, and such other details as the Commissioners may deem advisable. Such information, when received, to be properly classified in books prepared for the purpose, with full and complete indexes as will enable the Superintendent of such bureau at any time to refer to such institutions which take charge of any particular class of persons or patients, and to ascertain what relief any applicant to such bureau has heretofore received from any institution. The Presidents of all charitable associations which report to the Bureau of Charities may constitute an advisory Board to such bureau, and any one or more of them may, at all times, have access to the books and institutions under the charge of such bureau, and submit to the Commissioners any suggestions, in writing, or complaints concerning the administration thereof.

SEC. 71. All applications for money, property or loan of the City, by any charitable, eleemosynary or charitable institution or purpose, shall be made to the Department, before the same can be acted upon by the Board of Aldermen. When such application shall have been filed in the office of the Secretary of this Department, the said Commissioners shall have power to visit the said institution or charity and examine and investigate its condition and purposes, and if, they determine adversely to such application, the power of said Commissioners to visit and examine the same shall then cease, and be determined. If, upon a report of this Department, such aid and support or any part thereof, to such private eleemosynary institution or charity shall be extended by the Board of Aldermen and accepted by such institution or charity, said Commissioners shall thereupon be a Board of Visitors of said institution or charity, with power to send to such institution persons awarded for treatment or care, free of charge to the City, such cases as in the discretion of the said Commissioners can be better treated therein than in the public charities of the City. If such aid shall consist of money or bond of credit, said powers of said Commissioners shall continue during the period for which said donation shall have been made. If such aid shall consist of the use, and care of property of the City, then such powers of said Commissioners shall be perpetual.

SECS. 72 and 73. [Here add sections same as 38 and 39, supra.]

ARTICLE XIII.

DEPARTMENT OF POLICE.

SEC. 74. There shall be a Department of Police, which shall have the same powers and discharge the same duties which are now vested in the Department of Police by article 15, section 100, of chapter 555 of the laws of 1870, as amended by chapter 574 of the laws of 1871; and the members of which shall be elected as follows:

SEC. 75. At the election provided for by section 4 of this act, there shall be elected not more than fifty-five Commissioners, one-fifth to be elected in each Senate District of the City of New-York, as now established by law, to hold office for the period of — years.

SEC. 76. [A provision should be inserted for legislating out of office the present heads of Department of Police and Trustees.]

SEC. 77. At such election, each qualified voter may give not more than eleven ballots, upon each of which shall be printed or written the name of one candidate for Commissioner, and may give and distribute the same between eleven different candidates or a less number, in such proportion as he may see fit. After the closing of the polls on the day of election, the canvass in each election district of a Senate district shall be completed by ascertaining, asserting, and making returns to the county canvassers of the number of ballots given for each candidate. From the returns so made, the county canvassers shall determine the names of the eleven persons having the largest number of votes in each Senate district, and they shall be returned as elected. In the event of a vacancy or vacancies arising by reason of less than eleven persons being voted for in any Senate district, such vacancy or vacancies shall remain unfilled for the ensuing year. In the event of two or more of the persons voted for in any Senate district having received an equal number of votes, under such circumstances there shall be no full number of nine Aldermen having received the highest number of votes, the Aldermen elected at such election shall, within five days after their organization, select and determine, by lot, four among the said persons so having received an equal number of votes, a number sufficient to make up the full delegation of nine members from each Senate district, and the persons so selected shall be deemed elected.

SEC. 78. Per diem compensation of Commissioners, not exceeding five dollars, and their actual and necessary expenses, while actually engaged in the discharge of their duties, and their actual and necessary expenses for stationery, printing, and other incidentals, not exceeding the sum of — dollars per annum, shall be paid upon the certificate of the President of the Board, and the Comptroller of the City.

SEC. 79. [Provisions for legislating present Board out, and for the appointment of Inspectors of Common Schools.]

SEC. 80. [Insert clause similar to section 41, under article providing for Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, passing upon applications for public money, and make the same applicable to all cities of money to private educational establishments.]

[Article 12, &c., relating to Police, Health, and Fire Departments, not yet agreed upon.]

ARTICLE —

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. —. Every person who shall promise, offer, or give, or cause, or aid, or abet, in causing to be promised, offered, or given, or furnish, or agree to furnish, in whole, or in part, to be promised, offered or given to any Alderman, or any officer of the Corporation, after his election as such member, or before or after he shall have qualified and taken his seat, any money, goods, right in action, or other property or anything of value, or any pecuniary advantage, promise or prospects, with intent to influence the vote, opinion, judgment or action, on any question, matter, cause or proceeding which may be then pending, or may by law be brought before him in his official capacity, shall, upon conviction, be imprisoned in a penitentiary for a term not exceeding two years, or shall be fined not exceeding $5,000, or both, in the discretion of the Judge. Every Alderman or officer in this section mentioned who shall accept any such gift or promise or undertaking, to make the same under any agreement or understanding that his vote, opinion, judgment or action shall be influenced thereby, or shall be given in any question, matter, cause or proceeding then pending, or which may by law be brought before him in his official capacity, or shall, upon conviction, be disqualified from holding any public office, trust or appointment under the City of New-York, and shall forfeit his office, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding two years, or by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or both, in the discretion of the Court. Every person offending against either of the provisions of this section shall be a competent witness against any other person offending in the same transaction, and may be compelled to appear and give evidence before any Grand Jury, or in any Court, in the same manner as other persons; but no person who shall voluntarily give testimony shall be subject to any prosecution whatever, civil or criminal.

SEC. —. Any citizen claiming to have been injured by any such vote or action of any Alderman or officer given for any dishonest or corrupt motive or consideration, may bring suit against such Alderman or officer, and on his recovery shall recover a penalty not exceeding one thousand dollars.

SEC. —. No member of the Board of Aldermen, Commissioner, head of Department, Chief of Bureau, deputy thereof or clerk therein, or other officer of the Corporation, shall, directly or indirectly interested in any contract work or business, or the sale of any article, the expense, price, or consideration of which is paid from the City Treasury, or by any assessment levied by any act or ordinance of the Board of Aldermen, nor in the purchase of any real estate or other property belonging to the Corporation, or which shall be sold by virtue of legal process at the suit of said Corporation. All such contracts or sales shall be forfeited as to any interest of the Alderman or other officers enumerated in this section; and any Alderman, or other officer, who shall be convicted before the Court of Common Pleas of having knowingly been interested in any such contract, work, business sale, or purchase shall be punished as for a misdemeanor, and forfeit his office.

SEC. —. Any member of the Board of Aldermen, Commissioner, heads of Departments, Chief of Bureau, Deputy thereof or Clerk therein, or other officer of the Corporation may, if a Judge shall so order, be summarily examined upon an order, to be made on application or written affidavit: on the oath of any Commissioner of the Public Treasury, or any three Aldermen of said City or County, requiring such examination, and signed by any Justice of the Supreme Court of the First Judicial District, directing such examination to be publicly made at the chambers of said Justice, at a day and hour to be named, not less, however, than forty-eight hours after personal service of said order, and such examination shall be confined to an inquiry into any alleged wrongful diversion or misapplication of any moneys or fund, or any violation of the provisions in the last two sections, or any other delinquency charged on said affidavit touching the office, or the discharge or neglect of duty, of which it is alleged in the application for said order that such Alderman, head of Department or other afore-mentioned officer has knowledge or information, such Alderman, Commissioner, head of Department or other aforesaid officer shall answer such pertinent questions relative thereto as the Justice shall direct, and the examination may be continued from time to time, as such Justice may order, but the answers of the party charged shall not be used against him in any criminal proceeding; provided, however, that for all false answers on material points he shall be subject to the pains and penalties for the crime of perjury. The proceedings may be continued before any other Justice in said district and other witnesses, as well as the parties making such application, may, in the discretion of said Justice, be compelled to attend and be examined touching such alleged delinquencies; and such Justice may punish any refusal to attend such examination, or to answer any questions pursuant to his order, as for a contempt of Court, and shall have as full power and authority to enforce obedience to the order or directions of himself, or of any other Justice, as any Justice of the Supreme Court may now have or shall possess, to enforce obedience or to punish contempt in any case or matter whatever. Such examination shall be filed in the office of the County Clerk of the County of New-York, and be at all reasonable times accessible to the public.

SEC. —. No appropriation for the contesting of the office of Mayor, or any seat in the Board of Aldermen or Departments of Public Instruction shall be made to any but the prevailing party. Nor shall such appropriation be made except upon the certification as to value of services by the chief officer of the Law Department. In the cases provided under the preceding section, the Law Department shall assign counsel to such Commissioner or Alderman, but should such Commissioner or Aldermen see proper to employ other counsel than those assigned by the Law Department, then in that event no appropriation shall be made by the Board of Aldermen for his or their payment, except upon a certificate of the Justice or Justices before whom the proceedings have been had, that there was probable cause for taking such proceedings.

SEC. —. Any person holding office, whether by election or appointment under this charter, who shall, during his term of office, accept, hold or retain any other civil office of honor, trust or emolument, under the Government of the United States, or the State, or under this charter, or who shall accept a seat in the Legislature, or who shall during his said term of office, receive any fees or emoluments directed to be paid to him by any ordinance of the Board of Aldermen, as hereinafter provided, shall be deemed thereby to have vacated his office. No person shall hold the charter or County offices, nor shall an officer under the County Government hold or receive an office under the County Government, except when he holds such office ex officio, by virtue of his act of the Legislature, and in such case he shall draw no salary for such ex-officio office.

SEC. 1. [Provision with regard to contracts.]

NEW MAGAZINES.

—The Eclectic opens the year with a number which, taken as a whole, has hardly its equal in the annals of periodical literature. A novel, posthumous, and perhaps not equalled, but still a novel, by the greatest writer of fiction that America has ever known, is commenced, as is also a series of papers by our wittiest and most brilliant essayist. These two form the principal attractions, but there are contributions from others that follow close after, and greatly to the general result. The first article in the order of arrangement is a poem by LONGFELLOW, entitled "Lady Wentworth." Next comes the opening paper of HAWTHORNE'S story, "Septimius Felton; or the Elixir of Life," which are alive with suggestion, and filled with purely drawn descriptions of Spring time in New-England and early pictures of colonial life. To whatever extent one may doubt the possibility of weaving a semi-modern story of the highest grade out of so obsolete a theme as the title would seem to imply, it is impossible not to perceive the skill with which the idea has, thus far, been introduced, making the desire for perpetuity of life to arise from something very different than the fear of physical death. JAMES PARTON in "College Days of Thomas Jefferson" gives a thorough account of that portion of the sage's life, and the influences then at work to shape his future career. "The Heart of New-England" is a poem in EDWIN C. STEDMAN'S customary vein, and of more than usual merit. In "A Comedy of Terrors" Prof. DE MILLE offers what certainly seems like a repetition of the "American Baron." We could forgive the presentation of one anything, as is shown in the case of a young lady being driven almost to despair, and finally to marriage, by the multiplicity of the proposals made to her; but to expect us to be entertained by the adventures of another in a similar predicament is asking too much. "Change of Heart," by H. JAMES, Jr., is given in the form of a play, which is prevented from being very amusing by its vagueness. "Myths of the Barbaric World," by Prof. JOHN FISKE, is very entertaining, and "Diversions of the Echo Club," equally so. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES begins his serial "The Poet at the Breakfast Table," with a description of his early home, which contains many of the delicate outline sketches, noticeable in his best work. The account closes with a poem, "Homesick in Heaven," which, in pure, simple beauty, far surpasses any of the other poems in the number. "Grandmother Tentenden," by BRET HARTE, would be a production of considerable merit were it not for a confusing denouement which has been, for some unaccountable reason, tacked on at the last verse. The magazine has made considerable improvement in its reviews of "Art," "Science," and "Politics," all of which seem to be ably conducted.

—Harper's does homage to Christmas by a picture of Santa Claus on the opening page, followed by some bright, merry verses, in which his encounter with Cupid and his subsequent defeat are pleasantly described. "Holland and the Hollanders" is an illustrated article of great interest by HENRY JUDSON BROWN. The appearance of the retired amicable Dutchman of Delft, whose phlegmatic temperament—according to present belief—proved so great a turndout to our Pilgrim Fathers as to drive them to seek a change in the wilds of America, is described by Mr. BROWNE in a clear, realistic manner. The remarkable rise of Mrs. SIDDONS from a strolling actress to the position of queen of the British theatrical world is given in an article entitled "From a Barn to Drury Lane." "A Visit to a Greenland Glacier," with illustrations, is a condensation of Dr. J. J. HAYES' new book. JULIAN HAWTHORNE has written a story of great merit called "The Mysterious Case of My Friend Browne," which has about it much of the quaint mysticism which his name would naturally suggest. "Is Alaska a Paying Investment," by W. H. DALL, well de

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Dec. 8, 1871.

This morning the streets of Paris are covered, with snow, for the first time in several years, and to would be more agreeable sleighing of those who can afford it. The cold is intense. Yesterday morning snow began to fall, but the thermometer was above zero the afternoon and covering the ground before night. About 4 o'clock the omnibus lines had suspended their trips, and the cabs had taken their horses to the Company's stables, for, after mid-day, it was almost impossible for a horse to keep upon his feet, or to keep a wheel in motion. The opera of yesterday evening were very numerous, and as much as one can go for horses, and I noticed that some were without horses of the city, who seem to remain in whom they can find for probably such occasions. The theatres and halls for public amusement were very thinly attended in the most fashionable quarters of the city, while those in the more populous districts were crowded to overflowing. The Opera-house was almost deserted, and, I understand, the receipts of the evening were not sufficient to pay the expenses of the house. The Opera-house, which was crowded to overflowing, and the Opera-house, which was almost deserted, show that the country is rapidly coming to another revolution. To explain this, they believe that the Assembly must take matters into their own hands, assume the rights, to declare them power permanent, and make a monarchical government as soon as possible. This, it is said, is the secret why M. Thiers hastily revised his message, striking out the word Republic wherever it occurred, and emphasizing the policy of the Government where it accorded with the views of the Right. It is also said that several leading Legitimists have been so frightened by the growth of revolutionary ideas among the peasants, that they are quite ready to accept anything in the shape of a monarchy. The peasants are beginning to wonder why they should not gain something by revolution as well as the Parisians, and at least one rich proprietor had the satisfaction of hearing that his estates had been divided among small farms, the owners of which would be prepared to take possession when the "new revolution should begin." The idea that it is to begin, and that, this time, the peasants should work by it, has, undoubtedly, taken a strong hold upon the minds of the country people. Under this state of things France should constitute a provisional Government, as soon, but which? Certainly the one which divides the people the least, but what that is, I cannot pretend to say.

THIERS AND THE ORLEANS PRINCES.

Another point is now causing very general discussion. For some time there has been a report that the Duc D'AUMALE and the Prince DE JOINVILLE intended to take their seats in the Assembly when it reopened. M. THIERS few was a rule whenever the subject was mentioned. On Monday he met the Duc, and, the subject being mentioned, M. THIERS spoke very sharply, and there are rumors of high words between the two. At any rate the President left the Duc in anger, and it was said began to address a friend, "I will never give my consent," he said, with very emphatic gesture. "It is a violation of the engagement entered into with me. If they insist upon taking their seats in spite of their word, I will go before the Chamber and force it to choose between them and me." In the words of M. TRIFAUD, "Quand il est de bonne humeur, rien n'est plus charmant." Yesterday he began to talk with the Deputies who had returned, and gave out that it would be necessary to make some changes in the law, and Sunday it would not be needing Monday. He had still further concessions, and that day and Monday still further changes, and it was not until Wednesday night that the message was completed for the Assembly. What were the reports which led to these sudden changes? On that point there can not be a moment: The Deputies have come back discouraged and frightened. After the growth of Republicanism there in their constituencies, and the fear that the country is rapidly tending to another revolution. To avoid this, they believe that the Assembly must take matters into their own hands, assume the rights, to declare their power permanent, and make a monarchical government as soon as possible. This, it is said, is the reason why M. FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

[illegible]

MONDAY, Dec. 25—A. M.

The General Trade of the past week was active in Cotton and Cotton Goods. The stocks of the latter, of favorite mills, have been freely bought up, and the Domestic Commission men are indisposed to make concessions about except at an advance in prices. This would indicate that mill owners are not now anticipated either figures for the new material as the movements of the crop seekers develop themselves. It is doubtful, however, whether the Manchester people feel the same confidence in the future of Cotton Goods as their Colonial markets in the East and the markets of China and Brazil and the Continental markets, are supposed to be in danger of a glut, if not already overstocked. The receipts of Cotton at all the ports of the United States for the week, were 130,000 bales, equal, (for the first instance for some time past) to the corresponding week of last year. Prices, however, continue firm in New-York both for Cotton in hand and for future delivery, an advance on the cash price being paid for the Spring months.

While Gold has declined to 108½ @ 108¾ ₹ cent. since our last weekly review, and Money to the Brokers has ruled unusually dear and stringent, the Stock market has advanced from 1 to 2 ₹ cent. on the Railroads and continued firm on the Public Funds of the United States, and the feeling at the close of the week was decidedly buoyant on increased speculative orders and new combinations for a rise.

The weekly average of the Associated Banks, Local and National, reporting through the Clearing-house for the week ending Saturday last, Dec. 23, compare as follows with the previous week, and also with the corresponding week last year. To which we add the Gold and Currency balances in the New-York office of the United States Treasury at those dates respectively:

The Bank return published this morning exhibits the relative strength of the movement in respect to the lawful money held as against the circulation and deposits, to which we add the position of the movement the week before, and also of the movement of the corresponding week last year:

The Bank return shows a very large liquidation of Loans and Discounts, and even a much larger increase in the general line of Deposits, with an unexpected loss on the Gold average. The difference against the Greenback average was looked for. There is a considerable share of the decrease in Loans and in Deposits, due to the fact that the outside Banks, not members of the Clearing-house, whose reports have heretofore been included as a matter of courtesy, are now dropped from the Clearing-house return.

The Stock Exchange on Saturday adjourned early, and even while in session could register but few of the transactions made because of the Christmas Eve carnival which the members, old as well as young, feel bound traditionally to observe with penny whistles and such-like noisy demonstrations. After the adjournment there was considerable business done in the Hall of the Exchange between the Brokers, and as strongly advancing prices on nearly all the Railroads, and on some of the Railway Mortgages. Little is to regard was said to the Bank statement, although less favorable than looked for, and the month of December had before known so much Bullish market as today. New-York Central Stock and Scrip, Union Pacific Stock and Bonds, Rock Island, Wabash, Ohios, &c., were all in strong demand, and from 1 to 2 ₹ cent. higher than on Friday. The First Mortgages Bonds of the Union Pacific Road rose to 94 ₹ cent., and additional dealings were had in the Land Grants and Incomes of the same Road.

The Stock Exchange Building was closed up at 3 o'clock. The following quotations were made as compared with Friday night: The Southern State Bonds were exceptions to the general firmness. The Public Funds were steady in prices, but not active.

Gold sold down to 108¾ ₹ cent. in the forenoon, but after the Bank return, showing an unlooked for loss on the Gold average of nearly three millions, (accounted for by some of the Brokers by the exceptional loans made of the Banks early in the week in Gold by way of raising Money outside,) the price stiffened up to 109¾ ₹ cent.

At the very close the market was strong.

The Virginia Legislature on Friday resolved not to pay the Treasury interest on any part of the Public Debt of the Commonwealth, and then again adjourned over the Holidays.

The return from the Bank of England for the week ended the 6th of December gives the following results when compared with the previous week:

Rest	[illegible]	Decrease	£2,000
Public deposits	[illegible]	Decrease	2,000
Other deposits	[illegible]	Increase	2,000
Government securities	[illegible]	No alteration
Other securities	[illegible]	Decrease	19,000
Notes reserved	[illegible]	Increase	18,000

The amount of notes in circulation is £24,409,790, being an increase of £195,000 and the stock of bullion in both departments is £24,411,245, showing an increase of £17,061 when compared with the preceding return.

While the foregoing approach shows a decrease of £2,076,786, in other than Government deposits, the official state of the Bank shows a corresponding increase in the post bills, (or certificates of special accounts,) of which £9,000,000 sterling of $10,000,000 belong to the Treasury of the United States. This deposit is subject to the control of Mr. RICHARDSON, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, now, and for some time past, in London; and if not all exported in the "called" bonds of 1868, owned in Europe, before his return, the balance will be transferred to the Department at Washington, and the Bank of England post bills exchanged for Gold on this side. The Treasury receipts of Coin on hand on Saturday night $109,287,284, of which the Gold in the Bank of England no doubt constitutes a part. The Gold Circulation of the Treasury is now $24,980,000, which would leave the surplus of Gold in the absolute ownership of the Treasury $74,408,284.

UNION PACIFIC BONDS.

The undersigned offer the, at the current market rates, the First Mortgage and Land Grant Bonds of this Company.

The First Mortgage Bonds, due 1896, bear the same rate of interest as United States Five-twenties, (six per Cent. gold, free of tax,) they are a first lien upon the Road and its equipment.

The Land Grant Bonds are a first mortgage upon the remaining 11,000,000 acres of lands belonging to the Company, the proceeds of all sales of which are solely applied to the redemption of the Land Grant Bonds. The total sales of land to Oct. 31, 1871, were 499,141 29-100 acres, for $2,020,831 82, averaging $4 32 per acre. The net earnings for the first six months (of the third fiscal year) ending Nov. 1, 1871, were $2,460,219 04—more than twice the amount of the interest upon the First Mortgage and Land Grant Bonds, and about three times the amount of the interest upon the First Mortgage Bonds. The annual interest upon the First Mortgage Bonds is $1,634,270 gold; the annual interest upon the remaining Land Grant Bonds is $650,320 currency.

OF THE WEALTH OF INDIA, CHINA AND JAPAN.

GREAT BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

The trade with the East Indies and the adjacent islands of Asia, having been from the most remote ages the chief source of the commercial power of the British Kingdom. This trade has been carefully fostered and jealously guarded by all British statesmen. For many years the East India Company of the rich trade thereon in London, but the completion of the Pacific Railroads, and the establishment of a line of steam-ships between San Francisco, China and Japan are causing this great source of wealth to drift toward the United States, nearly all of the tea, silks, and other rich products of China and Japan now come to this country by steam to San Francisco and thence by rail to the East. The trade has grown so much in extent that already over one hundred carloads of teas and silks pass over the Pacific Railroads to the east each month. This business is bound to increase with time, especially when the "lightning ship" service between San Francisco and the East Indies is doubled, which will take place at an early day. Men of business understand the importance of this service of steamers as it affects the condition of tea and silks, and also the still greater importance of the saving of time in the interest account. Experience has demonstrated that the transaction of business across the Atlantic and Pacific, thereby, can and must be shortened. The accomplishment of this promises to be the date of the early future, for the construction of the Pacific Railroad, the Union Pacific Railroad from St. Joseph to Fort Kearney, on the Union Pacific Road. A large portion of the enterprise has been completed and is in actual operation for some time past. Only a comparatively small part of the Western Division remains to be built, and as soon as this is done, the distance between San Francisco and the Eastern and Middle States will be materially shortened. Everything indicates a large traffic for the road from the very start. We are now offering with our unqualified indorsement the remaining balance of the Eleven Per Cent. Gold First Mortgage Sinking Fund Land Grant Bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, Western Division, with both principal and interest in gold, and the interest payable either at New-York, London, or Frankfort-on-the-Main. These bonds are secured by a first mortgage on all the property and franchises of the Company, which covers 1,400 miles of road, now connected to the eastern by means of the United States for farming purposes. The mortgage indenture forbids the sale of these lands at less than (4) four dollars per acre, and the proceeds must be paid to the trustees—The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company—for the sole purpose of retiring these bonds. The bonds have thirty years to run, and the interest is payable in February and August of each year, free of tax. The bonds at prices (87½) and accrued interest to date, yield 8 per cent. They are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for the Company's lands.

On first May and last, the sales of Government bonds and other securities, the bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, and those of the Eastern Division, which were subscribed for through us at 87½, we have placed at 101½ to 102½ and accrued interest. We refer with satisfaction to the fact that these bonds have commanded a premium on the subscription price ever since the loan and all bids, and we have no doubt, those of the present loan will rank equally high after its close. EIGHT PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGE GOLD BONDS OF THE MOBILE AND MONTGOMERY RAILROAD COMPANY, INDORSED BY ALABAMA, $16,000 A MILE ON A COMPLETED ROAD. PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION. FOR SALE AT NINETY-FIVE AND ACCRUED INTEREST BY

SOUTHER & CO.,
NO. 5 WITHAM-ST.

THE WEST WISCONSIN RAILWAY IS completed to Hudson, and will have cars running to St. Paul by the commencement of the coming year. Thereafter will be the direct line for the Northern Pacific, Northern Minnesota, Manitoba and Hudson Bay Railroads as well as for the through business to the East, the line being 100 miles shorter than by the present route. The grants and subsidies of the road in lands and bonds are specially favorable. The road is now earning enough to pay expenses. The Land Grant and property of every description belonging to the Company is mortgaged to secure the payment of the Bondholders, and is held as security for the bonds, which are payable, principal and interest, in gold, bearing seven per cent. per annum. Bonds and the stock of the road are for sale by WERTHEIM & MORRIS & CO., No. 11 Wall-st., and GWYNNE, JOHNSON & BALL, Head of Wall-st., agents for the Company.

We are glad to learn that many kindly gifts have been sent to the Children's Aid Society in response to our appeals. Yesterday we received a check from "Jennie" for ten dollars, half for the Society in question, and half for the Five Points Mission. "J. C." sends us $1.75. Let it be remembered that for less than five cents a head, the poor starving children can be supplied with what is a rare luxury to them—a warm meal. We recently visited several of the institutions under the management of the Children's Aid Society, and if our readers could have looked on at the touching sights there presented, they would not be slow to unbutton their pockets. In one school the children—none of them above eleven or twelve years old—had recently been given a warm dinner by the kindness of some visitor. They had frequently asked their teachers since when they would have a similar treat? These children were miserably clad—some of them looked like bundles of rags—and the only food they get is what this Society can manage to procure for them. The sum of $12,000 was appropriated to it by the Legislature—but the Ring thieves thought the money would be better in their own pockets, and the poor children got none of it. So much for the "charity" of TWEED & Co., of which we have sometimes heard so much. Today, when most of our readers sit down to a good dinner, and delight in making their own children happy, we hope a generous thought will be given to the friendless outcasts of the streets. We shall still be happy to receive subscriptions, small or great; or they may be forwarded direct to Mr. C. L. BRACE, Children's Aid Society, No. 19 East Fourth-street. We once more assure our readers that every cent they contribute will be spent for the immediate benefit of the homeless and friendless children for whom we appeal.

The Suggestions of the Committee at Seventy.

The public has now before it the main portions of a new charter prepared by the Committee at Seventy. The work is, as will be seen, incomplete, and this fact will be borne in mind in judging of its details. The suggestions made have one prime advantage. They originate with a trustworthy body of sincere and capable men, possessed of some valuable experience, and enjoying the confidence of the public. They are, on this account, to be treated, not without candid criticism, certainly, but with respect. The existence and character of the Committee of Seventy gave to this community the opportunity of obtaining a new charter. The Committee's views as to what that instrument should be, will have something of the same kind and degree of weight accorded to its views of the candidates at the last election; and its general guidance in this matter, though not so completely binding as in the former instance, is a great advantage to the vast body of citizens resolute for reform which make up its peculiar and powerful constituency.

The charter of the Committee has, moreover, excellent features of its own. It does away with the multiplicity of local elective offices, the filling of which has for years past been the despair of busy citizens, and the opportunity of professional politicians. It gives the chief magistrate of the City an influential voice in the management of the Government, without putting that Government entirely in his hands. It provides by the method proposed for filling Aldermen and School Commissioners, and for choosing the Tenement Commissioners by the Aldermen, for a more just representation of the people, and against the irresponsibility which has accompanied both the rule by naked majorities and the "bobtailing" Boards. This, it is true, is a bold step, but it is one sustained by the conclusions of very many able students, and by conspicuous recent experience both in England and the State of Pennsylvania. That it has won the approbation of the Committee, which is made up of men of common sense, and not theorists, is nearly conclusive of its claims to a fair trial.

The Committee's charter provides for governing the City in the City, and by our own representatives. It avoids both the unpopular and evasive system of Metropolitan Commissions and the absurd notion of an impossible supervision of our affairs by the Legislature. Upon the Government thus returned to ourselves, it seeks to impose the essential check of single responsibility; requiring the publication of the votes of the Aldermen, the appointment of committees, the transactions of departments, and the expenditure of bids and contracts, and this in a form which avoids the bribery of the Press by useless advertising. It endeavors to further check extravagance, corruption, or neglect, by providing that our Justice of the Supreme Court, in the First District, may institute a judicial investigation into the conduct of officials on the application of certain financial officers, or of three Aldermen. It also gives the citizens the right to recover damages resulting from malfeasance of officials. It contains some definition of the crime of bribery, and removes the difficulty of obtaining testimony in such matters by allowing the Court to compel it, even though it implicates witnesses. It prohibits borrowing on the City's credit, except within the limits of one year's revenues, or by special act of the Legislature. And finally, it seeks to provide checks on the indiscriminate alienation of the public property, or funds for charitable or educational purposes, and to give the City an interest in such institutions as are aided, proportioned to the aid extended.

This enumeration of the principal items of the Committee's charter shows clearly enough that it is the fruit of study, that its purposes are such as all good citizens must approve, that it is reasonably consistent in its character, and that it has dealt with the one great evil of our Municipal situation—overwhelming proportions of ignorant voters, saturated with prejudice, and without direct and conscious interest in good government—with boldness and intelligence.

It is said, nevertheless, in our opinion, without faults and omissions. The provision for separate municipal elections in the Spring we consider of doubtful wisdom. The object, of course, is to present the issues involved in City Government by themselves, and thus to obtain an independent judgment on them. The error, we think, is in supposing that an adequate vote can be obtained in the Spring, on those issues alone, and in further supposing that voting on those issues, when the mass of electors turn out at general elections, may not be done just as independently as if the electors came out to vote for City officers alone. The fact that nearly twenty-five thousand voters who sustained the Democratic State ticket in this City voted the Reform local ticket, is an illustration of what may be expected in the future.

It is a serious question whether, with the publicity required by the charter—the provisions for which might be reconsidered with advantage—and with the prime safeguard of minority representation, it is necessary to have the entire City Government exposed to change every year. A strong objection to this is the indisposition of citizens, absorbed in other pursuits, to give so much time as is necessary to attend properly to annual elections; and another objection is the instability occasioned to all extended measures of local administration by frequent changes.

The provisions for securing accountability before the Courts are not so strong as they should be. The issuing of an order for inquiry on proper application should be made imperative, not optional, and the privilege of application should be extended. The result of the inquiry, if adverse to the official summoned, should be also defined.

Lastly, the principles just applied to the civil service of the United States should be applied to the subordinate appointments. If it be said that they are an experiment, we would point to the fact that they are sustained by an experience as ample and authority as high as the principle of minority representation so courageously and wisely proposed.

Who Cannot Not to be Speaker.

The leaders of political corruption and Legislative jobbery throughout the State are said to have settled upon THOS. G. ALVORD for Speaker of the next Assembly, and are waiting with all their might—and, we fear, with too good a prospect of success—to secure his election. The salt monopolists of Syracuse, whose salaried champion and attorney Mr. ALVORD has been for years, have joined their forces with the canal Ring, and, with the aid of the Fenton members elect, the lobbyists, and other corrupt combinations, they expect to secure his nomination in caucus on the first ballot. The Fenton men, pure and simple, notwithstanding all their boasting, do not number a majority of the Republican members-elect of the next Assembly; but they hope to gain a number of votes for their candidate among the "independent" Republicans, by representing the superior claims of Mr. ALVORD to the Speakership, arising from his great legislative experience, and acknowledged ability as a parliamentarian. These representations ought not, at the present time, to have a feather's weight in the mind of any honest and independent Republican, when urged in behalf of a man like ALVORD. What the coming Legislature needs for Speaker is not so much a great parliamentarian as an honest man. The overwhelming victory of the Republican Party at the last election, by which that party secured a two-thirds vote in both Houses, meant in the minds of the people—not merely reform in this City, but reform in the Legislature; and, if the Republican Party expects to retain its ascendency, it must not commence its work at Albany this Winter by electing for Speaker of the Assembly a notorious corruptionist and intimate associate of the Tammany thieves. If any member of the last two Legislatures is to be supported for Speaker, it should be one whose record is absolutely spotless, and who is personally above suspicion. Such a man Thomas G. ALVORD is not, and no man who has been associated with him on the floor of the Assembly for the last two Winters will pretend that he is.

A very large proportion of the next Assembly is to consist of new members. We assume that a majority of the Republican members, on whom will devolve the election of a Speaker, are honest men, and heartily in favor of promoting the reforms so clearly indicated by the popular vote at the last election. The best test that these members can have of the fitness or unfitness of the candidates who are urged upon them for the Speakership, is the kind and character of the influence brought to bear in their favor. We will venture to say that every corrupt combination, every "Ring," every legislative jobber, every lobbyist, every man who thrives on corruption at Albany, will be found urging the claims of ALVORD. There are some who might, perhaps, prefer HUSTED, of Westchester, if he were a candidate, but HUSTED is understood to have withdrawn from the contest, and turned over his strength to ALVORD, in consideration of his being made Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means. Even the Democratic members, with the exception of the few who were elected on the Reform ticket from this City, will scarcely be able to conceal their preference for ALVORD from any member who keeps his eyes and ears open. The Tammany members elect from this City are already boasting that, with the aid of the Fenton Republicans, and with "Old Salt" in the Speaker's chair, they are going to have things pretty much to their liking in the next Legislature. Should such a misfortune as the election of ALVORD occur, their boast will not be a vain one.

No one not familiar with legislative proceedings can estimate to what extent legislation may be shaped, and corruption either prevented or encouraged, by the Speaker. The leading Committees of the next Assembly, such as Ways and Means, Cities, Railroads, Commerce, Canals and Claims, ought, every one of them, to be composed of men who are known to be earnest reformers, and are unapproachable by lobby influence. Unless a majority, at least, of each committee are men of this stamp, one-half of the proposed measures of reform will be nipped in the bud through delay, neglect, or refusal to make favorable reports; while jobs, "strikes," and corrupt bills of all sorts will issue from the hands of the committees, and lumber up the files of members. Who believes that the reformers and honest men would have control of these committees if ALVORD were Speaker? Every one of them would be made up in the interest of the lobby. Let no "independent" Republican, therefore, be inveigled into voting for "Old Salt" on the plea that he is an experienced legislator and a great parliamentarian. Let them take up some man who is not identified with either of these leaders—a man like HENRY SMITH, of Albany, for instance, or HORATIO N. TWOMBLY, of this City, or Mr. SHAHAN, of Orange County. But under no circumstances should they support ALVORD for Speaker, or any man like him.

The Dock Commissioners.

It is matter of remark that Superintendent MILLER's reports, even where they simply give the figures returned by the insurance companies, fail to satisfy the reasonable curiosity of stockholders. Things are either jumbled promiscuously into a heap, or so solidly massed as to be impervious to anything like a critical investigation into the facts. This is especially true of the returns permitted to be made regarding the expenditures of the companies. The main-stay of public confidence, and even of stockholders' security in these corporations, is the honest and economical administration, by the officers, of the trust committed to them. But little or no supervision is exercised over the expenditures, and at the end of the year, when annual statements are made, aggregates of alarming proportions are presented without the least regard to specification or detail.

For example, the returns for 1870 of the fire insurance companies, made in accordance with the Superintendent's form of blanks, group under only six heads the entire expenditures of management of 105 joint-stock companies, aggregating the immense sum of $8,596,817 22. The only particulars asked for by Mr. MILLER, or given by the companies, in the following, (which we give with the aggregates belonging to each:) Officers' salaries, $2,481,221 31; commissions, $2,873,989 94; taxes, $1,101,398 07; office expenses, $2,139,270 89. The separate statements shed no clearer light on these expenditures, for they furnish no subdivision of these very general items. If we take up the return made by the largest of the companies, we find such lumping statements as the following: Losses paid, $1,388,415 84; cash dividends actually paid, $200,220; commissions and brokerage, $299,021 01; salaries and other charges of officers, clerks, and other employes, $263,089 95 (!); taxes, $109,651 24; all other payments, (unspecified!) $169,230 14; making a total of $2,335,628 18. It may well be that a further subdivision of several of these items, would materially assist both stockholders and the general public, in coming to a definite conclusion as to the management of the companies in which they were interested. And we see no reason why those persons whose capital has been embarked upon so precarious a line as fire or marine underwriting, should not be permitted to know how much their servants are paid for risking and losing their money.

We call Mr. MILLER's attention to this subject, because the present practice of his Department is in the direction of concealment and mystification, instead of being in the interest of those who want to know all about the way in which their money goes. If stockholders cannot get dividends, they are entitled at least to information in lieu thereof. To recur to the figures quoted above, why should nearly $300,000 be paid to a few officers and clerks, as against $200,000 to an army of patient shareholders; or why should the official reports be silent as to the apportionment of this vast sum? Right under Mr. MILLER's eyes, and we assume not without his knowledge, this Company, or rather its directors, last year made the officers a present of $100,000 over and above their already large salaries. But there is no word to appear in Mr. MILLER's report, as the Company's statement, which will tell the startled stockholders this fact. When a Company is paying out from thirty to forty per cent of its entire premium income for office expenses, salaries, and unmentionable items, as a majority of the New-York Fire Companies are annually doing—we think it is Mr. MILLER's duty to require such returns, and publish such reports, as will enable interested parties to get at the manner in which the spoils are divided. And, considering the fact that on the first of the present month the annual statements are to be prepared, we commend the matter to the Superintendent's attention. A little more scrutiny on his part, would save millions of dollars to stockholders, and strengthen our companies by compelling their officers to exercise economy.

A Bank Commissioner on Banking.

It is only necessary to watch the public proceedings of the Dock Commission, and to study a little their published reports, to find full evidence of their inefficiency. Take, for instance, their meeting of last week, which was fully reported in the journals of last Friday, and could anything be adduced against the Commission more damaging than their own words and actions?

They were evidently a good deal panic-stricken, on account of the exposures we have made and the light we have thrown on the administration of their Department; and so, perhaps, they were somewhat excusable for the ludicrous exhibition they made of themselves. Their chronic indecision showed itself in a very striking way. After spending a whole afternoon in solemn debate around the big green table, which they have pounded for the last two years, they finally and characteristically decided—to do nothing. They backed and filled, hemmed and hawed, explained their motives, defined their positions, justified themselves to themselves, and asserted their unadulterated patriotism. "Commissioner AGNEW," so the report reads, "acknowledged that the situation was extremely disagreeable. If he had the control of twenty millions of dollars, he would not pay out one dollar of it injudiciously. When he took the position he occupied, (salary, ten thousand dollars a year,) he did not take it for the sake of any salary attached to it. He had been a merchant for the past thirty years in this City," &c., &c. Mr. HENRY thought it a "shame that the Department should be compelled to retard its work on the docks, (what work?) simply because certain men had stolen money out of the public Treasury." Mr. School Commissioner WOOD "wanted to be put right on the record," and also said that "it was true that a great deal of the City's money had been stolen; but not a cent of the money of the Department of Docks was gone." Mr. HUNT and Mr. AGNEW "explained their votes." Mr. HENRY A. SMITH—who was unavoidably absent, where we do not pretend to say—could undoubtedly, if he had been present, have offered some explanations on his part, and perhaps, with his Tammany cunning, helped his fellows out of the scrape. We observe, however, that the Commissioners failed to allude to their fugitive colleague or to "explain" why they elected him Treasurer, and why they continue to keep him in that place. If it had not been for certain soothing and precautionary remarks of Mr. Commissioner HENRY, we fear they might have been led into premature action, and perhaps have been guilty of the folly of pestering the Controller with legal proceedings. Mr. HENRY, who is a lawyer, perhaps saw the futility of this at a glance.

The meeting was held to consider what action should be taken with reference to the refusal of the Controller to supply the Department with another million. A committee had waited upon Mr. GREEN to ask him for the money, "but could get no satisfactory answer (we quote from Mr. WOOD's fiery resolutions) from him in relation to the said one million dollars." Mr. WOOD declared that he wished the people to know "who was to blame for the delay in prosecuting the work on the docks," viz.: Mr. GREEN. He therefore proposed to resolve to apply for a mandamus compelling Mr. GREEN to raise the money. These belligerent resolutions, however, the Commission had not the courage to pass. Mr. HENRY "didn't feel like forcing money out of an unwilling officer." Mr. AGNEW "would rather not vote for the resolutions, in the hope that the Controller might soon see that he was not clearly in the right in the stand he had taken." Messrs. AGNEW and HUNT charged that "the fault of the present 'hitch' lay solely with the Controller." The purpose of all this talk about the Controller is evident enough. It is the effort of the Dock Commissioners to escape the responsibility of their own inefficiency. With their ship near a lee-shore, these crafty Commissioners are endeavoring to put anchors to the windward, so that their leaky bark may outride the storm of popular disappointment. They will fail, however, in their attempt. The public will sustain Mr. GREEN in every rightful effort to keep any more of the City's money from going into the hands of a Commission so notoriously dishonest as this Dock Department, and which still knows of its Treasurer no curtailing of salary as HENRY A. SMITH.

A Story on Scenery.

The projectors of the Charity Ball—which, as every New-Yorker knows, is regarded as the most brilliant and "select" of the public balls of the season—are accustomed to show each year great and commendable tact in the selection of the names on the large list of lady and gentlemen "managers." They strive to include in the list representatives of the different cliques, and, to some extent, even different strata of upper New-York social life, so that all shall give a willing hand to help the benevolent cause. This year, however, they have—from inadvertence, let us hope—committed the error of publishing in association with the names of a large number of the most respectable people in the City, the name of one "manager" who ought never to be tolerated in decent society. Perhaps unwittingly, but certainly, they have insulted public opinion, by making OAKEY HALL one of the "managers" of the Charity Ball.

Here is a man who, in his first estate, was nothing but a light-headed political trickster, and who now stands condemned by listless citizens as a confederate of notorious thieves—proved to be guilty of the prostitution of a high public office, yet conspicuously introduced into the company of honest and reputable people, by men and women of character and position. It is true that Mr. BELMONT is doing his utmost to prevent HALL's expulsion from the Union Club—from which he has not the decency to resign—but that does not condone the offence of the projectors of the Charity Ball, who ought in the interests of good morals and respectable society, to have rejected the name of such a man with contempt.

If every man, who, in New-York, was disposed to grossly and wantonly violate a public or private trust, or lend himself to mean and swindling enterprises, saw ahead of him, whenever his conduct should be exposed, the certainty of loss of position among respectable people of his acquaintance, the tone of morals would speedily improve in this City. We should hear less of political and corporate corruption, if every such offender felt sure that all his respectable friends would pass him by in the streets, first turn their backs on him in their clubs, and then turn him out altogether, and refuse him admission to their houses, as unfit for the society of decent people. There has been a great social upheaval here within the past few months, let us remind the Charity Ball projectors, and honest people are really in earnest in their determination to reform old abuses, and to punish the scoundrels who have held their offices only to cheat the public and steal their money.

It so happens that HALL is the only member of the Ring whom social ostracism by decent people can much affect, and on that account it should be used in his case. TWEED's friends in the Sixth Ward are not very likely to ostracise him because he is a great thief, for too many of them are in that line themselves, only in a smaller way; and he never has associated privately with people who cared for their reputations, except, perhaps, when some "high-toned" speculator or real estate owner met him very privately to consider a plot for money-making, or to arrange for a mutually profitable reduction of an assessment.

But with HALL it is different. He has been admitted to the society of honest people, has been allowed in their drawing-rooms, and has wormed himself under friendly guidance into their clubs. Now that he is held by the public to be guilty of the basest offences, and only keeps the office he disgraces because the Legislature is not in session to turn him out, it is high time for society to banish him entirely to the company of the Bohemians who laugh at his empty jests around the congenial board of the "Lotus Club."

The Political Epidemic.

Another outbreak has occurred of that peculiar epidemic so prevalent among Tammany politicians since election. It has already deprived us of several persons whose names have become familiar to us in connection with the reports of investigating committees and the City accounts. It has cut off from us both the SWEENY's, "HUGHEY" SMITH, INGERSOLL and GARVEY, and now we have to mourn the loss of the illustrious CORNELIUS CORSON and CHARLES E. WILBOUR.

Both these individuals were prominently connected with the New-York Printing Company. Both of them had suddenly risen from obscurity and comparative penury to affluence and notoriety. The public felt confident that their services had not been properly rewarded—that, notwithstanding the fortunes they had acquired, "they had not had justice done them," and they were anxious that they should receive their reward.

The sudden change in the temperature of New-York has, however, been too much for their sensitive organization, impaired as it was by their labors for the public good. They have found it absolutely necessary to seek a more equable and bracing clime, and have sought it, summarily and secretly in Canada, where only can be found that steady temperature below zero which seems to be necessary to build up the exhausted systems of the Tammany chiefs. These sudden departures cannot but cast a feeling of uncertainty over the public mind. Who can tell who go next? Great solicitation is expressed for SANDS. He looks healthy and strong, but no healthier and no stronger than the SWEENYS. Appearances are deceitful, and particularly in Mr. SANDS' case, as the venerable PETER COOPER has of late publicly acknowledged. Let us, however, hope that our SANDS will be spared to us—at least until Mr. O'CONOR and Mr. TILDEN have completed their duties.

MINER TOKLAS.

The inhabitants of the district between Thirty-fourth and Forty-ninth streets, will have to cancel many Christmas orders determined. That region of the City is now plunged in total darkness. On Saturday evening all the lights went out, and rushers of families were running about in every direction in search of candles. The Gas Companies somehow seem to be putting us in training for a total of this kind, by giving us as little gas as they can for a great deal of money. But people were not prepared for sudden darkness. Yesterday boys were hawking candles from house to house, and charging twenty cents each for them. There was not a candlestick to be had at any store. Mr. DELMONICO was besieged for help from morning till night, and although he did his best to help people out of their scrape, he could not oblige half the applicants. We should advise those who intend to take their own candle with them—it will be the most apropos Christmas present they can make to their kith and kindred. The Gas Company notice can be had before often their stress into allowing it they want to do a good business.

Is human ingenuity unequal to the task of devising some new and amusing toy for gulliana? Every year good parent—fellow goes hunting over the toy-shops for trifles to give to his children, and every year he finds exactly the same things offered to him which he has been buying all his life. Old "stock" is brought out and polished up—a little fresh paint is daubed over the dolls' faces, and the springs of jack-in-the-box are mended. There is the shaggy bear utters a plaintive bleat when his neck is pushed down, the boy that emits a dismal wail when you pull a string, the Santa Claus whose inside opens to receive candies, the Noah's ark, the drum, the horse, and the box of nine-pins. But a child who has arrived at the mature age of eight has seen all these things over and over again, and is weary of them. Germany sends us thousands of toys, but sends nothing new. The youngsters look over your store of presents, and tell you with a sleepy air that they saw them all last "birthday," or "Thanksgiving." The toy-keepers must be rather tired themselves of seeing the same old assortment stuck about their stores. Will not somebody or other try to prepare a new sensation for the children by next Christmas?

The account of Sing Sing, which we publish today, may not be very lively Christmas reading; but the story is at least an interesting one, and people ought to know what goes on in the chief prison of the State. Our correspondent had the courage to try some of the instruments of torture on himself, and his description of the thumb-screw is consequently more vivid than we have ever seen before. There is urgent need for the revision of our prison discipline—if anybody doubts it, let him read the excellent article on our fifth page.

On the 15th of next month the United States Supreme Court will deliver the decision upon the constitutionality of the Legal-tender act. It will be seen from the announcement in our Washington dispatches that the Court stands but one more in favor than against this decision, and that those who oppose it include some of the ablest and most experienced of the Judges. The opinions to be delivered will pass into the history of our Government as among the most important ever given, and the bare majority by which the result is reached will cause them to be studied with intense interest.

Tammany politicians are making a great effort to induce the Judges of the Superior Court to fill the place of Chief Clerk of the Court, made vacant by the resignation of the fugitive from justice, JAMES M. SWEENY, before the 1st of January, when the two recent Judges just elected will take their seats upon the Bench. Sheriff BRENNAN, it is said, is trying to make an arrangement by which he is to support JOSEPH MEEKS, the son-in-law of Judge MEEKS, for Chief Clerk, on condition that his relative, M. J. MALONEY, shall receive the place of Deputy Clerk, now held by MEEKS. MALONEY has just been removed from the Finance Department by Controller GREEN, and both he and MEEKS have long been adherents of the Tammany Ring. MEEKS' name was signed to every one of the fraudulent naturalization papers that were scattered broadcast over the State in the campaign of 1868, and which cheated Gen. GRANT out of the electoral vote of New-York, and imposed JOHN T. HOFFMAN on the State as Governor. MEEKS and MALONEY ought to be made to retire from office with their "Ring" masters, instead of being promoted to better berths, and the Superior Court Judges will best consult their own interest, as well as that of their constituents, by delaying the appointment of SWEENY's successor until the newly-elected Judges can have a voice in the selection.

The World yesterday wound up one of its exercises in broken English by the remarkable saying: "Re uno duce omnes." This is, perhaps, an improvement, but it is rather rash in the World to try any Latin until it has acquired the rudiments of its mother tongue. Its ignorance is not very creditable to its Johnsonian model.

The reports of the principal Massachusetts railroads, recently made to the Railroad Commissioner of that State, present a satisfactory result as compared with similar returns in other States. There has been an increase of passenger traffic on all the lines with the exception of the Fitchburg. This line appears to have lost eight per cent. The total number of passengers carried by eight roads during the year ending September, 1871, was 25,703,225, showing a gain of eleven and a half per cent. over last year. The gross earnings were $17,889,456, an increase of nine per cent. During the same period the goods traffic increased from 4,189,000 to 4,340,000 tons, nearly seventeen per cent. In consideration of the increased earnings, the companies deserve credit for a more liberal treatment of shippers, and for manifesting a greater desire to accommodate passengers. This we gather from the circumstance that last year the net income was twenty-seven per cent. of the gross receipts, while this year it is only twenty-eight and a half per cent. We find, also, that Boston has gained most by the increased traffic. The roads, which have their terminus in that city, branch through the State in such a way as to encourage the idea—if it has not heretofore been pretty well established—that nothing good can be had out of Boston. The result is that people will run to town for the most trifling knicknacks, and in this way local travel has been greatly augmented from year to year.

GERMANY.

The Recent Naval Expedition—Grand Duke's Anthem—A New Naval Station—Gen. Von Roon's Resignation—Cost of the Imperial Navy.

[Special Cor. of The Times.]

BERLIN, Tuesday, Nov. 28, 1871.

The recent discussion of the naval estimates brought the foolish question of the German Navy once more before the public. In opposition to the Government proposal, the demanded sum, voted in full, was charged to the French indemnity. But that was a matter of little importance; the real question at issue was the object of the naval establishment, the opinion on this point still vacillating between naval supremacy and the humble function of a coast guard. Count Roon had expressed very eloquent attacks on the scheme of the past, taken by the navy in the late war, which was only did the practical service by its very little force, but the administration was so badly managed that, for instance, the Imperial Crown Prince intervened with the consideration that only four months after the outbreak of the war, importing for the Ministry, Count Roon, requested for the present all outlays for naval armament, leaving that question to come through commodity and excess to another time, when the German fleet is to dictate. Germany's naval Power of the second order, but numerous only to protect and hide coasts, and harbors and the merchant marine, leaving the fleet from the Baltic and the North Sea, and the German Ocean, to be managed according to circumstances, so as eventually to secure about the German coast, like bees around a hive. The distribution being very fair by six, the fleet is to have the shape of a cigar, and for safety to move only at night and under water, with only the funnel and a rudder being uncovered, the chimneys protecting. Thus the darkness of the night will contend, especially as the vessel is intended to move at extraordinary speed. It is shot-proof, of course, wholly composed of iron plates, but not of very great thickness. The engine, heated with petroleum, is built, at the stern end, the rudder being at the bow, corresponding to the bow. To enable the steersman to see where he is steering to, there is a small hole drilled into the shot-proof revolving tube, through which he can peer. The make and application of the torpedo is treated as a secret. The weapons will be concealed in the hold of the vessel, whose crew will comprise three or four men, their office being to approach hostile vessels cruising in German waters unaware, apply their torpedoes, and be off.

AMUSEMENTS.

Scene of Amusements.

Matinées and evening performances are given today at all the City theatres. At Wood's Museum, three representations are to occur.....“Julius Cæsar” will be acted at Booth's, tonight.....Herr WAGNER, there this afternoon at the Grand Opera-house, and Mr. and Mrs. FOX-SON appear there in “The Ticket-of-Leave Man,” this evening.....At Steinway Hall, “The Messiah” will be interpreted by Miss KELLOGG and the New-York Mendelssohn Union.....A pantomime called “The Red Witch” is mentioned as the most notable feature of the programme of the Union-square Theatre.....At the New-York Circus, a grand Christmas pantomime, entitled “Goody Two Shoes,” will be the chief attraction afternoon and evening, until further notice.

Lectures by Mr. Wendell Phillips.

On Thursday night, Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS is to lecture at Steinway Hall, before the Mercantile Library Association. The subject will be “Street Life in Europe,” and the address will not be delivered again in New-York this season. Mr. PHILLIPS is sure to be greeted by an appreciative audience.

The Illness of Mr. Jesse Grant.

The Cincinnati Gazette of Thursday gives the following particulars of the sudden attack of illness upon the President's father, from which, later accounts say, he has partly recovered:

“Mr. JESSE R. GRANT, father of the President, was stricken with paralysis in the Covington Post-office, yesterday afternoon, about 1 o'clock, and fell to the floor where he remained for nearly half an hour, unable to speak, and apparently insensible. He was conveyed in that condition to his home in Greenup-street, near Fifth, by some of the clerks in the office. We called at his residence about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and found him sitting up in a chair, and able to talk a little. He did not seem to regard his case as a serious one. He informed us that he had been in his usual health recently, though for some days past his appetite has been poor. Dr. THOMAS had been sent for, but had not arrived when we left. Mr. GRANT's age is seventy-six years. At 9 o'clock last evening Mr. GRANT was feeling easy.”

DISCIPLINE

Sing Sing Prison.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Dec. 12, 1871.

As I drove up to Sing Sing Prison, last Friday, the long white Dissectors building, with its sentinel boxes, perched around on every conceivable, its guard-house, well stored with muskets, pistols and ammunition, and the guard, rifle in hand, pacing up and down—save one—were the impressions of a military barrack than a prison. But any such ideas were rudely dispelled at the door of the jail. "The Way of Transgressors is Hard," is the greeting of Sing Sing to the wretched convict as he steps, perhaps for the first time, within the portals of a prison. (Of the 473 new arrivals at the prison in the year 1870 no less than 417 were what are technically called "first convictions.") Cannot stern justice, without pandering to maudlin sentiment, think of some more encouraging, more charitable quotation—one breathing more of forgiveness—to inscribe over the jails to which she consigns offenders against the law? To those hardened by a long career of crime it does not appear. They disregard such lunch-stuff, and often, after they have regained their liberty, make a joke of it in their favorite resorts. Those to whom a prison sentence is a new sensation, and who are often horrified and distressed at their position, must be chilled and discouraged on reading it. Charity would turn away her eyes from it and exclaim: How many who read these words are or should be objects of our sympathy! But Sing Sing knows neither charity nor sympathy. Every one of its inmates is, to the callous eye of authority, a law-breaker and nothing else. The majority belong to the very worst class of criminals, and the unfortunate minority suffer in consequence.

Sing Sing, as a State prison, labors under serious and irremediable disadvantages, some of them natural. It is the worst located and worst arranged place of incarceration that human brain ever planned. Standing directly on the bank of the Hudson, only a short run from the town of Sing Sing, with the Hudson River Railroad in a cutting immediately in front of it; surrounded, not by prison walls, but by hills, quarries, creeks, caves and gorges, it presents to the convict continual temptation to attempt to escape. This is not only a bad thing for the convict, but entails a vast expenditure on the State in the shape of salaries for a small army of keepers and guards, while it frequently results in the shooting down of the prisoners. Prisoners have sometimes sprung on to a passing freight-train. It is only a few months since a notorious gang got away by jumping on board a propeller which came up to the dock, and steaming away for the Jersey woods. Some of these are still lying helpless in the hospital ward of the prison; one of them with two bullets in his body. The prison is altogether too unprotected, and on too large a scale for effective government and supervision. Twelve hundred men, and one hundred women are often confined there. Such a body of convicts is unwieldly and unmanageable. The authorities themselves complain of the excessive numbers committed to their charge, and point to the generally dead character of the prisoners as necessitating a very stringent régime, in order to enable them to preserve proper discipline.

To guard the 1,180 prisoners, the average number last year, cost for officers' salaries $89,681 25 a year. The total ordinary prison expenditure is $264,226 92, including one item, "miscellaneous," of $18,505 43. This last amount is far too large to be so generalized. Compare these figures with those of the report of the Albany Penitentiary, issued a few days ago. There the number of prisoners has averaged 514 through the year. The total expenditure for their guardianship, clothing, maintenance, &c., was $90,490 62, (no miscellaneous,) as against $264,226 92 at Sing Sing for the same items. Though the number of convicts at Sing Sing is only about two and a quarter times as many as those at Albany, the ordinary expenditure is more than five and a half times as much, and yet Sing Sing, with all its force of guardians, cannot prevent the prisoners from constantly escaping. True, a large number of them are recaptured; but in twenty-five years only one prisoner has escaped from the Albany Penitentiary.

The prison buildings at Sing Sing stand on filled-in ground jutting out into the river, and form three sides of a square, the river side being open. The prison for males, which comprises the entire front, is 484 feet long, 43 feet wide, and 50 feet high. It contains 1,191 cells, built in six tiers, each cell being 7 feet long and 3 feet 6 inches wide. The prison is sometimes so crowded that the jailers have to place two prisoners in a cell. This is a very bad arrangement, and has led to more attempts at escape than anything else, from the opportunity of plotting which it affords. The prison for females, a separate building on the other side of the railroad, has 119 cells. At present the inmates of the prison number 1,074 men and 111 women. During last year 473 new prisoners found their way to the men's prison. Among them were 1 actor, 1 dentist, 1 lawyer, 2 broker, 2 teachers, 1 civil engineer, 70 accountants and clerks, (the report does not state how many of them received starvation wages, but one of the officials assured me that many a young clerk comes there who is driven to robbing his employer by the inability to live on the pittance paid him as salary,) 5 merchants, 1 preacher, 1 female musician, 1 publisher, 5 physicians, 1 sculptor, 1 deputy sheriff, 99 "no occupation," 3 "thieves," and 1 "loafer." These last, I presume, are little bits of pleasantry, either on the part of the prisoners or of the agent, Mr. RUSSELL. The names of the well-known and publicly-convicted Tammany thieves are conspicuous by their absence from the list of prisoners.

In the main square, running parallel with the main prison, are the kitchens and dining-hall. I saw the men at dinner. All dine together; and their close-cut hair, shaven faces, with a week's growth on them, and striped serge dress, many of them wearing the repulsive-looking iron collar and crown for punishment, present a curious but very unpleasing coup d'œil. It was Friday, and therefore fish day. The men seemed to eat heartily, though, judging from the uncooked fish I saw in the kitchen, they all must have been wofully thirsty as the afternoon drew on. However, as Mr. Weller tells us that it is folly to quarrel about horse-radish when you've got beef, I suppose the prisoners don't mind the excessive saltness of their dinner so long as a bucket of drinking water stands in each workshop. Still, they might prefer a little less of the saltpetre. The bread appeared to be of better quality than the fish. It is of the second grade of flour. So soon as dinner is over the various gangs, about twenty-five men to a gang, march with the lock-step from the dining-hall to the workshops, which are built in rows parallel with the north and south wings, to resume their daily labor. As one of the gangs passed me the keeper pointed out one JACK COUTER, a notorious counterfeiter. He is about fifty-five years of age, and has passed thirty-four years of his life in prison.

Shoe-making, saddlery, hardware, malleable iron, coffins, making and marble and limestone quarrying are the principal branches of industry carried on at the prison. The labor of the prisoners in the shops is let out to contractors at forty cents a day for each prisoner; but as his cost per day is 62½ cents, he entails a daily expenditure on the State Treasury of 22½ cents—dead loss. Only 300 male prisoners are employed by the contractors. At least 200 more would be available, if the contractors would take them, adding one hundred dollars a day, thirty thousand dollars a year, to the income of the prison. The contracts, however, which were made formerly for five years, now expire every year; and business men are apt to fight shy of putting up costly machinery, and going to other heavy expenses on a contract which they are by no means sure of getting renewed. All the shops are provided with the latest mechanical inventions for saving labor. In the office of one of the contractors, acting as clerk, I saw CHAUNCEY JOHNSON, the great bank-burglar, who has spent half his life in different prisons. He took me in with a fully professional glance in an instant, and kept his face turned away. In the hardware saddlery-shop I encountered VAN ERDEN, who gave the detectives so much trouble with his bond forgeries. He is a fair, squarely-built man, of medium height, and does not betray any phrenological evidences of his propensity for stealing. One hundred prisoners are engaged at present in working the quarries, which lie in the side of the hill, sloping up from the railroad track. The sales of material raised last year realized $68,044 99. This year the earnings of the quarries will be considerably less, in consequence of the Legislature having omitted to make the usual and necessary appropriation for carrying on the work. The quarries were only fully worked during the first four months of the year. Still, the agent thinks that while the total earnings of the prison will consequently be $30,000 less, the total expenditure will be decreased at least $20,000. Of the other prisoners, one hundred and fifty are old, or physically incapable of hard labor, and are employed in the halls and in cleaning cells, making beds, and other light occupations. From seventy to eighty more are cripples, or sick in the hospital; the rest are all usefully employed. Among the old men is a colored man named WM. JACKSON, who is ninety-seven years of age. He has been in the prison for twenty-eight years, on a life sentence for burglary. The old gentleman is hale for his years, and has the use of all his faculties, and, at his advanced age, says he would be glad of his release from prison, that he might see the world once more.

The female prison has at present 117 inmates. They are all, with the exception of those who do the cleaning, cooking, washing and ironing, employed in making those thin Summer striped and brown holland jackets which are as sure a sign of Summer as the lately-arrived swallow. But their labor is not very remunerative, the wholesale price of these articles, especially prison work, being very trifling. The contractors only pay 32½ cents a day for each prisoner's labor. Consequently there is always a deficiency to be provided for at the end of the year. Last year the deficiency amounted to $18,233 18. It will surprise some people to learn that two female prisoners escaped from the prison in 1870. There are seven women under sentence for life—six for murder, and one for manslaughter in the first degree. Their looks do not lead one to suppose them capable of such crimes. Many of the larceny prisoners have much more unprepossessing countenances, with one notable exception. In the sewing-room sat a girl of unusually attractive appearance—a beautiful face, elegant figure, soft brown hair and delicate complexion. In spite of her uncouth prison dress, she looked as though she had been born and bred among the élite of society—one of nature's noblewomen. "Yes," replied the official, in answer to my whispered remarks on her personal appearance and beauty, "she is a very pretty girl. There's no doubt of that. But," he added with an emphasis, "she's a very bad one. Why, Sir," he continued, "that girl is a married woman, and the mother of three little children. But she comes of a family of thieves. This is her second term of imprisonment here. That woman," pointing to another and older prisoner, "is her mother, also here for the second time. We've got the father and husband over in the male prison." What a family record! I could not resist the temptation of scanning narrowly this girl's features, but the more I did so the more perplexed I became. I could scarcely believe, but for such convincing testimony, that so ingenuous and fair a face could belong to a brazened and incorrigible thief. But there is little doubt of the fact. The girl herself does not deny it.

I visited the hospital, a large, airy, lofty and well-lighted apartment on the first floor of the south wing. The doctor's office and apothecary's shop are close at hand. The sick prisoners are apparently allowed some few desirable privileges, such as talking and playing harmless games to wile away the time. I asked to be permitted to see the wounds of a poor fellow who had been badly shot in two places, and has consequently lost the use of one of his legs. The wounds, as far as my unprofessional eye could judge, were clean and healthy, while the bandages were as fresh and nice as those in use in ordinary hospitals. This is as it should be. It was not by any means a pleasant, though a self-imposed task; but I have heard so much of neglect and careless treatment in prison hospitals that I was determined to see for myself. Of course, as to the surgical treatment I can say nothing. Not more than eight or ten patients were in the hospital. There have not been more than twenty-five in the hospital at one time during the year. This speaks well for the healthiness of the prison and its location; especially when the previous bad habits of many of the prisoners, and the fact that some of them are ill when they arrive, are taken into consideration.

The prison chapel is over the hospital. The service of the Dutch Reformed Church is performed every Sunday morning, and the Chaplain also occasionally visits each prisoner in his cell. Arrangements have also been made for Catholic prisoners receiving the ministrations of the Church. There is, however, one paragraph in the last report of the Chaplain to the Inspectors which demands attention. He says:

"By a statute of the Legislature I think each convict is entitled to a Bible and hymn-book; that this is both a wise and most commendable provision cannot, I think, be questioned; scarcely a day passes but I am compelled to deny applications for both these books. May I be permitted to make an earnest appeal to your honorable Board to urge upon the Legislature the necessity of making a special appropriation for this object?"

Whose fault is this? Where are all the Bible societies and prison associations? Such should be an important feature of their work, above all, in such a case. They have distributed plenty of Bibles for Africa and Asia; but none, apparently, for the dwellers in American prisons, who need them as much as any heathen in Africa or Asia, 10,000 miles away.

The prison library contains about five thousand volumes, embracing moral, religious, historical, biographical and scientific works. At specified times the various gangs are marched to the library, in charge of their keepers, and are allowed to select such books as strike their fancy. They are also allowed the use of weekly papers and periodicals, all of which are carefully selected by the Chaplain. In addition to his other duties, the Chaplain exercises supervision over all the correspondence of the prisoners. By law they are allowed to write to their friends once in three months. Their friends, on an average, write to them about twice as often. This examination of all letters passing to and fro may possibly be necessary; but it has this great drawback—that it tends to prevent a prisoner from informing his friends in the event of his suffering ill-usage at the hands of his keeper.

And now for "the chamber of horrors." Passing through a small entresol in the hospital wing, I found myself in that relic of barbarin ages, the prison punishment room, or, as I prefer to term it, the torture chamber. As I glanced hurriedly around at the various implements of legalized cruelty, I could almost fancy I saw ERYNNE, minus his ears, or the Jesuit garb and shaven crown of some long-dead Conductor of the Inquisition. There are no thumb-screws, no racks; but there are other appliances relatively as brutal, considering the enlightenment of the age, and it is no secret that they are often and vigorously used. There are five modes of punishment in vogue in the prison—the "dark cell," the "ball and chain," the "collar and crown," the "back handcuff," and the "thumb pulley," the last the most ingenious torture of the whole collection. The ball and chain are attached to prisoners who have attempted to escape, by a band of iron riveted round the leg, just above the ankle. This may be a necessary precaution to prevent them from repeating the attempt, but it is unnecessarily cruel to keep them on the prisoners when locked in their cells, as their weight and inconvenience must render them most undesirable bed-fellows, and likely to interfere with the amount of rest the wearers require to enable them to go through the next day's labor. The "collar and crown" is put on for trivial offences, such as talking. It is composed of a circular band of iron, which is fastened round the neck with a padlock, from which five or six iron bars spring and join over the scalp, forming a sort of rude crown. These instruments vary in weight from four to seven pounds. They are constantly in use. I saw several of the prisoners wearing them, both in the dining-hall and in the workshops. It does not require a very lively imagination to conceive the distress and annoyance of having to stoop for ten hours over the shop bench with seven pounds of iron dragging at the nape of the neck and weighing down the head, or the dexterity required at night to pad and stuff the machine artistically with dirty stockings, pocket-handkerchiefs or anything that comes to hand, in order that the wretched prisoner may rest his head on his pillow without the iron grinding into the skin.

The other punishments are all for refractory or violent prisoners. The dark cell is an ordinary cell, without a stick of furniture, which is closed by a solid iron, ungrated door. The floor is covered with sawdust. As the door closed on me I could fully appreciate the horrible situation of the Egyptians of old, when they were visited with the plague of "darkness that might be felt." But the dark cell is, in many cases, a punishment very detrimental to the health of those who suffer it. Prisoners of the degraded class—a class to which a large majority of the prisoners at Sing Sing belong—are desperately obstinate, and will suffer considerably before rendering submission. Many a one has passed two or three weeks, and even longer, in the dark cells at Sing Sing. But the exclusion of light means exclusion of air and stoppage of all ventilation—a fearful deprivation. And, moreover, any medical man will vouch that light is in itself very necessary to health. Many doctors declare that a sunbath is almost as useful in its way as a cold water bath. There must, of course, be vigorous punishments for breaches against prison discipline, but the most advisable forms have not yet been hit upon. Next Spring the International Prison Convention assembles in London. Let us hope that this matter of punishment will receive their most earnest consideration, and that thorough reform will follow.

By way of delicately leading the readers of the TIMES up to the horrors of the "pulley," I will first tell them something about the "back handcuff." Along the wall of the punishment-room are five stout hooks driven into the wall about four feet from the ground. When a prisoner refuses obedience his hands are put in handcuffs fastened behind him. To the connecting link a strong ring is attached, and this ring is hoisted on to one of the hooks on the wall, forcing the head and shoulders forward, and drawing up the arms behind and the lower part of the body into a cramped and painful posture. The keeper told me that they once had a prisoner who bore this punishment for six hours and a half before he would give in and agree to behave himself.

But the most diabolical of all these instruments of torture is the "thumb pulley;" for its power of inflicting agony far surpasses all the others put together. I do not hesitate to say that its use in an American or any other prison is an outrage on Christian humanity, and a burning disgrace to the boasted civilization of the nineteenth century. I can speak from personal experience. I was so horrified at the keeper's explanation of the mode of working it that I turned round and requested him to try it on me. The fellow was rather taken aback, and suggested that it would not be pleasant—in fact, that it was "rather painful." Rather painful! It is the most excruciating agony. I replied, "That is the very reason why I want to try it." He somewhat reluctantly consented, and the operation of torture began. He produced about a foot of very stout whip-cord, with a slip-knot at either end, and putting my thumbs in the loops, drew the knot taut below the first joint. The cord was then hung on a hook attached to the end of a rope which dangled from a pulley in the ceiling, and the preparations were complete. On my giving the word "ready," a brawny-armed convict seized the other end of the rope and quickly hoisted me from my feet till I could with difficulty touch the floor with the tips of my toes; the whole weight of my body, of course, dragging on my thumbs. I was literally suspended from those two small portions of the human frame. I hung there for about five seconds, after which the pain became insupportable, and I requested to be let down. In those few seconds I experienced quite enough to assure me what must be the indescribable suffering of a man or woman suspended for even a minute. And yet the keeper told me that a prisoner once endured this hellish torture for five minutes and a half "without fainting." It seemed to me that my thumbs and the tough sinews on the inside of the wrist were being drawn out. I felt that my arms must leave the shoulder sockets, and that the muscles of my back would be literally torn away if I were not let down immediately. I found when my thumbs were released from the slip-knots that there were evident signs that the cord had almost buried itself in the flesh. An indentation over an eighth of an inch deep encircled each thumb. It was of a transparent white color. Then came a band slightly discolored, and then a band of red. The flesh did not altogether regain its natural appearance on one thumb for some time after. And yet I was the victim of this engine of torture for only five seconds! Many tender-hearted and humane persons may be inclined to comfort themselves with the hope that the infliction of the punishment of the pulley is of rare occurrence. Let me undeceive them by quoting from the last official report of the Inspectors of State Prisons. In table No. 14, under the heading, "Exhibit of Punishments During the Year," the following item appears: "Pulled.....208!" Omitting Sundays, this total gives an average of four prisoners "pulled" every week through the year.

That such brutality is practiced at Sing Sing, Auburn and Clinton is not the fault of the prison authorities, but of our prison system. The law, though forbidding the shower-bath, allows these punishments to be inflicted at discretion; and in this case permission is indirectly an ordinance, for all these forms of punishment were discussed at the time of the passage of the act abolishing the use of the shower-bath in the State Prisons. A criminal is a human being, even when he is a refractory criminal; and every consideration of common humanity cries out aloud against his being subjected to such horrible punishment.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Solicitor-General Bristow's Resignation—Gen. Schenck's Minister Relations Severed—The Amnesty Bill—An Honest Department.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The resignation of Solicitor-General BRISTOW, which was placed in the President's hands over a week ago, is the subject of great misrepresentation as to the cause that prompted it. Col. BRISTOW was in no wise an aspirant for the office of Attorney-General, and his resignation is for private and personal reasons, entirely disconnected from his official relations. He studiously refused to allow his friends to use his name in connection with the office of Attorney-General, and such mention as was made of his name was without his permission, and rather the consequence of a spontaneous appreciation of the fitness of such an appointment than a suggestion from himself. Col. BRISTOW resumes his former law partnership with Gen. HARLAN, of Louisville, next week. It is understood that the vacant position of Solicitor-General has been tendered to United States District-Attorney NORTON, of Missouri, an officer whose record here is very high.

THE LOST BOOK.

In the dispatches of Saturday, which gave an account of the curious disappearance of a copy of the "Case of the United States," the inference was unintentionally conveyed that Secretary FISH was partly responsible for the loss of the document. Such was not the fact, as the Secretary did not have the document in his custody at the time.

OUR MINISTER TO ENGLAND.

Gen. SCHENCK has disposed of his stock in the Emma Mining Company, of which he was a director, and concerning which so much trouble has been made in certain quarters. It would appear from the information at hand, that he has not taken this course at the demand or suggestion of our Government, nor because he deemed his connection with it any more improper than heretofore, but from his desire to avoid even a suspicion of evil and not to give ground for scandal prejudicial to himself, or to the interests of our Government with which he is charged. He has furnished precedents in defense of his connection with the enterprise, in the practice of diplomatic officers and ministers of other Governments than our own resident in Europe. The general sentiment among Congressmen has been that while the affair was to be regretted as a bad precedent for the representatives of our Government abroad, there was nothing really censurable in it. The announcement that, in deference to public opinion in this country, he has withdrawn from the company, will nevertheless be gladly received.

AMNESTY.

The action of the Senate in amending the Amnesty bill in order to prevent its becoming a law before the reassembling of Congress must not be taken as indicative that it will not at some other time during the present session receive favorable action. It is stated by those not specially to be regarded as the friends of the amnesty policy that the necessary two-thirds vote in the Senate will be easily secured, if not for the present bill, for one somewhat modified in its terms. The friends of amnesty will urge speedy action, but whether they will succeed in this depends much upon what they are willing to concede to several cautious men, who will insist on incorporating some provisions they think absolutely essential to the protection of the public Treasury, and some other interests, to their minds, of great importance. Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, gave expression to similar views to these during the debate last Thursday, and some inquiry shows they are shared by many Senators.

THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

It has fallen to the Interior Department to be exceedingly fortunate in the character of its officers, in whom it has rested responsibility for the disbursement and collection of the funds necessary for its operations. Since the beginning of President GRANT's Administration, not a dollar of the public funds has been lost to the Government through the dishonesty of any one of the officers of this Department. In the few cases where irregularities have occurred, they have been speedily detected by the Department, and the interests of the Government have been fully protected, and loss prevented. In the late pension frauds at Philadelphia, the Government has recovered the whole amount of the misappropriated funds.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE LEGAL-TENDER CASES.

The full opinion of the United States Supreme Court in the legal-tender cases will be delivered on the 16th of January. Those who will unite in the majority are Justices DAVIS, SWAYNE, Miller, Swayne, and Bradley, and those in the minority, Chief-Justice Chase, and Associate Justices Clifford, Field, and Nelson. In addition to the majority and minority reports proper, it is expected several of the Judges will express their opinions on different branches of the question.

TREASURY INVESTIGATIONS.

The Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department have not been charged with such an investigation as the Secretary is having made, which is a counting of the funds of the Treasury, which it is supposed will occupy twenty counters four months. The investigation of the Committee has to do with accounts, expenditures, vouchers, and the administration of the affairs of the Department in all the ramifications. This investigation has already commenced, and although delayed somewhat on account of the absence of Democratic members of the Committee, it will be resumed immediately after the Holidays.

Efforts of the Recent Insurgents—Schemes of Scoundrels for Gunboats—Action of the Central Department—Recruitment of Insurgents—An Engagement Simulated—John Chinaman's Treasure.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Dec. 16, 1871.

A better feeling now prevails in Havana. I do not mean to say that the people have forgotten the scenes witnessed only a few days ago; but everybody engaged in business is trying hard to make the bad impression produced disappear as much as possible, although the same business men, when we return home, will most likely speak about nothing else, particularly if he himself or any of his intimate friends has grown up sons. A number of our citizens, principally Spaniards, who had sons studying at the Havana University, sent them by yesterday's steamer to Spain—partly in order to have them conclude their studies there, but mainly to get them out of harm's way and remove them from temptation. The next steamer will take another batch, and, from present indications, it appears as if the Havana University would soon reach the goal marked out by the ultra-Catholic and ultra-Spanish Party, and become a kind of sparsely-attended high school or gymnasium. That the decline of the University will produce a consequent decline in other institutions of learning, is only natural, and must prove injurious to young men who have not the means of going abroad to study. But it will prove of immense advantage to the sons of the middle and mechanic classes, and to the country in general, as the fortunate youths will bring back different ideas, opinions and habits, setting those who have not been abroad a laudable example, and thus rousing them from their lethargy, so much of their much-vaunted traditions of old Spain successfully opposed by the spirit of the present century.

REPENTANT INSURGENTS.

A very important move has just been made in the Central Department, originating undoubtedly with the Spaniards, but made by their allies and tools, the surrendered insurgents. These surrendered Generals, Governors, and other trash, have signed a petition to the King, and placed it in the form of a manifesto to their countrymen. These ex-rebels, in the first place, protest their adherence to the throne, and inform the King and people of the island that they are disposed to aid the Government, which undoubtedly is partial confirmation of the rumor which we had some weeks ago, namely, that these ex-insurgents would organize, and in the pay of Spain go forth to kill their countrymen. The repentant rebels then continue to state:

"We rose in arms in favor of a political idea which was not supported by the majority of the Cubans, and we have seen our illusions vanish, because our efforts were opposed by and foreigners also stayed away while we found out that Spain had sufficient materials to maintain the integrity of its territory. The Camagüey insurrection, the most powerful of all, had, in December, 1868, from three to four thousand armed men, and from three to thirty-five thousand adherents. The first blow was given by Gen. RODAS in April, 1870, and was followed up by VALMASEDA with such success that the insurgents have only from three to four hundred men, now (in the Central Department) principally negroes, who are without resources, and are commanded by IGNACIO AGRAMONTE, disobeyed by the orders of Quintana. From Las Tunas to Moron not a single house is left standing, and the country terrifies by its silence. The political idea has disappeared, to make way for the idea of destruction, and if this war is prolonged, it is done with intentions which honorable and conscientious men cannot countenance, and which those still at war will be both to see and to regret. We are working to make themselves masters of the situation, if they do not already command in the insurgent districts. The revolutionary idea has degenerated into an idea of ruin, and the Cubans who subscribe, protest against the prolongation of a fight which can only be productive of ruin to the children."

The salvation of this part of the island lies in the immediate pacification and reconstruction of the country. Peace is the great need, and this idea is in every Cuban's mind, irrespective of political opinion, and is given expression in the hearts of the insurgents. Those who sign know the sterling character of Gen. VALMASEDA, but in order to secure an early triumph it is necessary that VALMASEDA's conciliatory policy be continued, the effects of said policy being seen in over forty thousand surrendered persons. When the island is once pacified your Majesty will make all concessions to this island compatible with our nationality, and with a special regard to our social constitution. The signers of this (they number 3,235) abjure their past errors, and believe that they represent the ideas of the largest portion of the fourteen or fifteen thousand insurgents who have surrendered during the past year, and are individually and collectively ready to do what may be required of any honorable and loyal Spaniard."

This manifesto must produce great effect, because it is signed by many influential men. The fact that they are renegades to their cause does not matter in the least. Such small trifles as fighting for free Cuba today and against it tomorrow are not so severely regarded here as they would be in the United States or in Europe. Among the most prominent signers are Lope Recio, Miguel Zaldivar, Fernando Agüero, Cornelis Porre, Pedro Recio, Joaquin Miranda, Manuel Agüero, Teofilo Agüero, Fernando Cespedes, Joaquin Betancourt, Mateo Leal, Juan Pupero, Tomas Zayas, Melchor Bernal, Javier Varona, Rafael Varona and Maurice Montejo, who were all at one time considered great men and legislators for free Cuba, and who are now fighting on the other side.

JOHN CHINAMAN'S TREASURE.

The Chinamen are once more in trouble, yesterday's Gaceta having published a law which reduces them to the condition of slaves. Those who arrived after the year 1860 must lease themselves out again, working for the planter at $12 a month, when it is known that the poorest negro receives $17 monthly. In my next I shall give a fuller account of this law.

How Two Californian Boys Killed a Panther.

The following story, narrating how two boys killed a panther and two cubs, is told the Sacramento Union by a subscriber, residing in Colusa County, Cal.:

"Permit me to make known to you an incident which transpired during the Summer months at the north fork of Grindstone, in Colusa County. The particulars are related to me by Rowsmore, a gentleman residing in the vicinity of Newville, upon whose veracity you can safely rely. He says two young men, with them he is personally acquainted, started to the mountains, as is customary, with a band of sheep. One was named ORLANDO BURRIS, aged fourteen years, and the other CHAS. HULL, aged eighteen. After getting thoroughly settled in their cabin and the sheep under good control, they started off one bright morning trout fishing, having with them a sheep-dog and a jack-knife, the latter in the possession of young HULL, and the only weapon of defense in case of an attack from any wild animals. They had not gone far when they came to an old moss-grown log, and were about to step on it when out springs a large she-panther and her two cubs. Young BURRIS blessed the sheep-dog on the panther. He immediately seized the dog by the head and was punishing him in a frightful manner when young BURRIS came to the rescue, catching the panther by the tail and endeavoring to pull her off the dog. In case the panther let go her hold it would have been sure death to the young adventurer. Just in the nick of time young HULL, seeing the danger his companion was in, drew his jack-knife and rushed to the scene of the conflict. Running his hand down over the panther until he felt the pulsations of the heart, he raised the knife, and, with unerring aim, drove it clearing into the panther's heart. The animal fell dead between them. Thus, by the merest accident, the lives of the two young heroes were spared. A few days afterward they hunted up the two cubs which escaped during the fight with the old one, and killed them also. Any person paying a visit to their father's residence can see the three skins hung up as a trophy of the victory they accomplished. The dog recovered and is as faithful as ever."

The Arrests in Salt Lake City for the Murder of Dr. Robinson.

From the Salt Lake (Utah) Tribune, Dec. 14.

Yesterday the city was thrown into considerable excitement over the arrest of three men, charged with the murder of Dr. ROBINSON, which occurred in this city half a dozen years ago. The arrested parties are ALEXANDER BURT, JAMES THOMS and J. L. BLYTHE. The murder, whoever committed it, was one of the most deliberate and brutal ever perpetrated in the United States, and should the perpetrators ever be found out, they will undoubtedly pay the extreme penalty of the law. Dr. ROBINSON was called out of his bed at night, to visit, as he supposed, a man who had met with a severe accident, and was knocked down with an axe, or some such instrument, and shot and stabbed in different parts of his body, as was supposed by several different persons. Salt Lake was greatly disturbed by the horrible deed

From a Special Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Dec. 9, 1871.

The Central Committee of the International has recognized "Citizen DILKE" as the future first President of the Republic of Great Britain. A number adopted a resolution of sympathy with Sir CHARLES DILKE; but the President quietly put a veto to such anti-democratic sentiment as "the Charles" they could not recognize hereditary titles. He could only be recognized by what is "Charles DILKE." Well, Citizen DILKE has been in Birmingham and made a speech against the hereditary principle. He called to mind the House of Lords; but even our cousin was his way to the abolition of the Hereditary. There was a great row for the Town Hall of Birmingham; even than radical town has a few loyalists. They pelted Citizen DILKE as soon as he rose on an old platform. The Republicans shouted, and Radicals from Rochdale got a hearing for a good half hour—at last the Mayor came for a civic lady of Public, who quelled the fault of the republican loyalists. Bravo and encouraged by the earnestness of the Birmingham Democracy, they marched out of the hall shouting:

"Rule Britannia, Britannia rules the waves,
And Britons never, never, never shall be slaves."

Great cheering in the hall; and Sir Citizen DILKE went on with his speech, and was heard as soon as the excitement and shouting had subsided, for the retreating Tories had left a slight reverse in the shape of snuff or Cayenne pepper, or both, scattered upon the floor.

ANTI-HOUSE OF LORDS.

Birmingham came pretty strongly for a reformation of the House of Lords; but the loudest shouting at the meeting were given for the third clause, the Birmingham, you see, is small alongside the road to Republicanism, and that of a more decided type than you can give them any further for. But the International, I should have said further back, seems very little about republicanism. Had not a Republic shot and banished its abscess cancers at Paris? A monarchy could do no worse, and might be more magnanimous.

"MODERATE" REFORM.

Mr. FRASER-MACKINTOSH, who is quite moderate in the reforms he advocates, wishing only to abolish the hereditary principle, land monopoly, and the Prince of WALES has been lecturing at Stoke-upon-Trent and Walsall on the "Impeachment of the Duke of Brunswick," and "The Land, the People and the Coming struggle." At Stoke-upon-Trent he had the Corn Exchange to spare at the vigorous protest of Lord LITTLETON; and a useless body of police kept order. He contended "that every politician of land was unknown when that holding was chargeable to the interest of the general mass of the people, and that the holding of land carried with it the duty of cultivating land, if the land could be cultivated with fair profit."

"THE HOLE-IN-THE-WALL."

Here in London, while Democratic sentiments are propagated through the working men's associations and echoed in every debating hall, the leaders who guide A political agitation, sometimes get together by the ones in very unenviable fashion. At the Hole-in-the-Wall in the small hours of Tuesday morning, there was a great row between the two agitators, ODGERS and ODGER. ODGERS complained of the scanty of Democratic contributions. ODGER jumped up in a rage and said he would have Cambridge ejected from every Democratic caucus throughout London. ODGERS asked if he, ODGER, was Dictator, and said he had done more for democracy than ever ODGER had. ODGER said this was a lie, and as the quarrel grew stronger, other members mixing in, ODGER shouting as the top of his voice, denouncing ODGERS as a traitor to democracy, and ODGERS replying:

"Oh, you are not going to be dictator. I and other working men do not choose to look up to you as your and assume about a republic. You know as well as I do that with all the forces and all the real working classes against you, you have no chance of a republic. You don't mean anything but talk, and you are not the person to give such a republic. [Hear the speaker, who is a very powerful man, gave emphasis to his declaration by bringing down his fist with great weight, and shivering into several pieces the desk, already split.]

Mr. DIGGS (with greater vehemence than ever)—I tell you, Odgers, you are a disgrace to the working men, and having deserted the principles of your own you have no right to. We have I have passions; but you—you pluck our passions, and strut about in it; and, what is more, you are the dirty Nick that feeds every republican and every democratic nest you can get into. [Hear, hear, and great uproar.]"

And so on and so forth. The three tailors of Tooley street begin to seem gentle and respectable personals.

THE GOVERNMENT'S PLANS.

The Government is very busy preparing its measures of legislation for the coming session of Parliament, its policy being to make such reforms as will satisfy the great body of the people that a monarchy could do more for them than a republic. The Ministry are to be congratulated on the success of the Education Act, which has given satisfaction to all, the Nonconformists and Dissenters only excepted. The Land question is still in a chaotic state, and no harm can accrue from postponing legislation upon it for another year. There are quite enough Government measures to be prepared for the crush through Temple Bar."

And he don't like what Citizen DILKE is doing any better, and says:

"To hewers the formula of the country justice—providence has blessed Sir C. DILKE with health and strength, instead of which he goes about the country doing his best to render Peerage Reform odious, to make Radicalism synonymous with Republicanism, and to drive the timid and moderate into the ranks of Conservatism."

[illegible]

And if, by any means the Government could now be forced to resign, or dissolve Parliament, and bring on a general election, Citizen DILKE might see the startling phenomenon of a Conservative majority in a new House of Commons.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

In all these agitations the women suffrage question is not lost sight of. A central committee of delegates has been established in London, with JOHN STUART MILL for President. A meeting has just been held in Birmingham, good speeches, CHARLES DAWSON in the chair, at which resolutions were made and very neat and clever speeches, by Miss Sturge, Mrs. Fawcett, Miss Ashworth, Mr. G. Dixon, M. P., and Hon. Auberon Herbert, M. P. The advocates of women's rights in England stick to respectability. A few have said and written some pretty strong things on the Contagious Diseases Act, but that is an exceptional case. There is no prominent propagandist of women's suffrage here who could be spoken of, as one of our lady countrywomen is, in an important English journal, as "that peculiarly foul-mouthed female at Steventon, Mrs." So and so, of whom it is said that "it is shocking that many parts of her Lectures were so utterly disgusting as to be unfit for the ears of decent people."

These are my capitals, my italics, my points of exclamation, and they are much too weak for my surprise and indignation.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

For the past week ending with Saturday, Dec. 23, the market, although firm, has been dull, but few public transactions having been made and those effected not of a noticeable character. In fact the total value of City real estate sold at auction at the Exchange, for the week amounts to but $83,850, as against the sum of $190,300, the figures for the preceding week ending with Saturday, Dec. 16. During the present week no special activity is looked for, as all the sales to occur (a list of which is given below,) are to be made under Court orders, but soon after Jan. 1 business cannot fail to be better, as the auctions to take place in January especially are of importance, and the property to be offered both valuable and desirable. AUCTION SALES.

WHEREAS, THE FREDERICKSBURG and Gordonsville Railroad Company of Virginia, by their deed of mortgage, dated the 1st day of January, 1866, and recorded in Hustings Court, City of Richmond, State of Virginia, aforesaid, in Deed Book T. T., pages 163 to 178 inclusive, and in the several counties through which the Fredericksburg and Gordonsville Railroad runs, did convey to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of the City of New-York, and its Successors the Trustees therein and therein described, as follows:
"All and singular the railroad of the said party of the first part, from and including the terminus and depot at Fredericksburg, in the County of Spotsylvania, State of Virginia, and thence on the usual route and depot at Charlottesville, in the County of Albemarle, State aforesaid, a distance of sixty-two miles, together with all and singular the tracks, works, lines, rails, bridges, ways, rights of ways and materials, buildings, piers, wharves, erections, fences, walls, fixtures, privileges, franchises, rights, and interests, real estate and personal property, tangible and intangible, of the said party of the first part, and belonging to the said party of the first part, of every kind, nature and character in the State of Virginia, and all the issues and profits to be had or derived from the same or any part or portion thereof, or any thereof, upon the portion of said term or terms or other of them, and all rights to receive or recover the same, and all railway stations and depots, with all the appurtenances necessary or convenient, or theole, complete and entire use and enjoyment of the said railroad, and all the appurtenances of the said road or railways owned or leased by the party of the first part, and also all the locomotives, engines, tenders, cars, carriages, tools, and machinery, belonging or appertaining to the said railroad and railways, and used therewith, and all improvements or additions made or to be made to any one or all of said properties, estates, railroads or railways, and their appurtenances by the said party of the first part or by others; also all and every other estate, interest, property or thing which the said party of the first part now and hold or may or shall hereafter acquire, and hold necessary or convenient for the use, occupation and enjoyment of all or any of the said railroads, powers, leases and property, rights, privileges and franchises or any part or portion thereof, and which shall and privileges to use the said road-beds, tracks, sidings, turnouts, connections, and the same to be constructed for the convenient use of said railroad or railways, or any of them, owned or leased by the said party of the first part, as fully and effectually as the said company, party of the first part, is or may be by law entitled to have or enjoy."
Which conveyance so made to the said the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of the City of New-York, was made to it as Trustee, to secure the payment of five hundred bonds of one thousand dollars each, and of one thousand bonds of five hundred dollars each, executed by the said The Fredericksburg and Gordonsville Railroad Company, of Virginia, all payable on the 1st day of November, 1896, and payable to the bearer thereof, in gold coin of the United States of America, at the City of New-York, on the first day of November, which will be in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, with interest, at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, in gold, in the City of New-York, upon the first day of May and the first day of November in each year.
And whereas, it is provided in said mortgage deed, that if the interest on any of said bonds shall not be paid when the same shall become due, and if such interest shall remain in arrears for three months, that then the said Trustee, or the Trustees for the time being, or the holders of at least one-third of said bonds, shall cause the said premises, real and personal estate, rights and franchises therein described, to be sold at public auction, in the City of Richmond, in the State of Virginia, or in the City of New-York, as the Trustee may elect, as and in the manner provided in said deed.
And whereas the semi-annual interest which became payable on said bonds on the first day of November, A. D. 1870, and also the semi-annual interest which became payable on said bonds on the first day of May, 1871, has remained in arrears for three months, and more, and the said The Fredericksburg and Gordonsville Railroad Company of Virginia has made default in the payment thereof, and the holders of more than one-third of said bonds have requested the said Trustee to proceed to sell the said premises, real and personal estate, rights and franchises, according to the provisions of said deed.
And whereas, the said Trustee has elected that the same shall be sold at public auction in the City of New-York.
Now, therefore, the said The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of the City of New-York, Trustee as aforesaid, in conformity with the provisions of said Deed of Mortgage, will, on the 26th day of December, A. D. 1871, at 12 o'clock noon, on that day, at the Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the City of New-York aforesaid, proceed to sell the above-described property, rights and franchises, and will then and there cause the same to be sold at public auction, to the highest bidder, by Adrian H. Muller, P. T. Ackerman & Co., Auctioneers.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS FOR WRAPPING PAPER AND TWINE.
POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22, 1871.
SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at this Department until the 24th day of January, 1872, at 12 o'clock, noon, for furnishing WRAPPING PAPER AND TWINE for the use of the Post-offices in the United States for one year from the 1st day of February, 1872, the said articles to be delivered, free of expense, to the Postmasters, at the Blank Agency of the Post-office Department, Washington, D. C.
First—Specimens of the proposed quality of each article required are to be furnished as follows:
12,000 reams of wrapping paper, 20 by 25 inches in size, and to weigh 40 pounds to the ream, each ream to contain 500 sheets, uniform in quality.
100 reams of Wrapping paper, 25 by 40 inches in size, and to weigh 60 pounds to the ream, each ream to contain 500 sheets, uniform in quality.
50,000 pounds of Twine, in balls, to weigh from one to two pounds each, to measure from 50 to 55 yards to the pound, to be 3 ply, and so bound as to prevent their becoming loose and tangled by transportation.
Samples of the paper and twine will be furnished on persons who may obtain the contract, on application to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.
More or less than the estimated quantities may be required, at the discretion of the Postmaster-General.
Bids for more than one article will be received, at the discretion of the Postmaster-General.
Bids will be received from persons who may be willing to furnish any one of the articles specified, with the best and most advantageous terms for each article separately if deemed most advantageous to the Department.
A failure to furnish promptly any article contracted for, on an attempt to impose upon the Department articles inferior to the specification of the Postmaster-General, to these specifications, will be considered sufficient cause for the forfeiture of the contract.
Bids not made in conformity with this advertisement will not be considered.
The Postmaster-General reserves the right to reject any or all bids if, in his opinion, it is required by the interests of the service.
Proposals must be addressed on the envelope "Proposals for Letter Envelopes," and directed to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.
JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

PROPOSALS FOR LETTER ENVELOPES.
POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22, 1871.
Sealed Proposals will be received at this Department until the 24th day of January, 1872, at 12 noon, for furnishing envelopes for the use of the Post-offices in the United States for one year from and after the 1st day of February, 1872, of the following specifications:
First—Envelopes to be of weighing eight ounces, average size, to be graduated down to quarter ounce. Of this class 1,000 will be required.
Second—Envelopes of the same capacity, graduated by the metric system. Of this class 100 may be required.
Third—Envelopes of the weighing four pounds, average size, to be graduated to half ounces. Of this class 500 will be wanted.
Perfect uniformity and durability will be required in the articles furnished.
Samples of the various sizes of envelopes must accompany each proposal. Bidders who may obtain the contract will be required to furnish envelopes of a quality in accordance therewith.
Each envelope must be securely packed in a box for transportation, and delivered, free of all expense, to the Bank Agent, Washington, D. C.
Each bidder must accompany his proposal guarantees of his ability to comply with his bid, and a certificate from a Postmaster that such guarantors are reliable persons.
Bids without these guarantees will be required to be rejected.
Awards will be made for each article separately if deemed most advantageous to the Department.
Two sufficient sureties will be required in each contract.
A failure to furnish promptly any article contracted for, or an attempt to impose upon the Department articles inferior to the specification of the Postmaster-General, to these specifications, will be considered sufficient cause for the forfeiture of the contract.
The Postmaster-General reserves the right to reject any or all bids if, in his opinion, it is required by the interests of the service.
Proposals must be addressed on the envelope "Proposals for Letter Envelopes," and directed to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.
JNO. A. J. CRESWELL,
Postmaster-General.

The Weather Prophets.—A Remarkable [illegible]

Whether wise people predicted from Saturday night's cloudy and threatening sky that Christmas would bring, if not severe and bitter cold, a biting blustering, showery and disagreeable Christmas, these prophets, or other human prophets, were very far from the truth in their predictions, the temperature of yesterday proving a surprise of everything. Hence prophecies have since been disregarded, and the enjoyment was manifest. The sidewalks, [illegible] at 9 A. M. and at noon, both bright and glorious as a day in early Spring. Notwithstanding Saturday night acted as more than sufficiently effective street-cleaners. The snow and frost of the past days had disappeared as if by magic. Pedestrians in light pants and thin boots could walk unscathed with impunity, and the drooping vehicles and boot-blacks opportunity was gone. At 1 o'clock the thermometer marked 50 and the barometer 30.5, and this being the hour of the Sunday morning service, the churches were filled with worshipers, thinly clad and in good spirits. As an illustration of the mildness of the weather, Central Park was probably visited by more people than on any previous day during the past month. The mall and the carriage-drive were brilliant with pleasure seekers. The lovers of skating were of course disappointed in their anticipations. Those like those people who love an occasional "[illegible]" on the ice, and who, in this holiday with lungs free and hearty cheer, will no doubt easily console themselves. The Brooklyn, Jersey and Hoboken ferry-boats were overcrowded with crowded Market and other [illegible] the ferries, and the Brooklyn and Prospect Park was quite a centre of attraction. It was surprising that the weather should bring a disagreeable day on, but at 3 P. M. the thermometer rose to 60 F., the barometer had only fallen five degrees, while the barometer was at 30.25. Many fears were expressed throughout the day that the unusual mildness might prove injurious to the public health, but we will have to purchase the money by an increased bill of mortality. These fears will, no doubt, prove groundless, and the unexpected warmth and sunshine will be breathed with much enjoyment again.

The Bank Robbery and the Police.

By direction of Superintendent KELSO, an extra squad of patrolmen from Jersey City was sent to Fulton, last evening, and from 8 P. M. until nearly 11 o'clock, in order to afford all possible protection to persons then returning from Brooklyn, against the operations of burglars, who might seek to take advantage of the crowds about the church doors. Fortunately the night was clear, and the moon was nearly at the full, and the streets were much nearly as light as at any time during the previous day. Thus the very purpose of the extra police force was defeated, and the burglars, if any were abroad, had ample opportunity to pursue their vocation without molestation. The Jersey City squad returned to their quarters at 11 P. M., and reported all quiet in Fulton.

The Cincinnati Abortion Case.

Dr. John Beach, assisted by Dr. John McDermott, yesterday made a post-mortem examination of the remains of CATHARINE CARTER, who died at Bellevue Hospital, as was alleged, from the effects of an abortion. The deceased, who was about thirty years of age, had been taken to the hospital from the boarding-house, No. 23 Pitt-street, in Cincinnati, on Friday. The post-mortem revealed no evidence of the use or abortion, but it was ascertained that death had been caused by puerperal convulsions. Nothing whatever is known of the history of the deceased, as she was a stranger in the boarding-house from which she was taken, and Mr. BAZIN brought her photograph to us as a means of identification of that her friends may be discovered. Coroner HERRMAN will hold an inquest in the case.

Probable Shooting in Twenty-Fifth-street.

An affray occurred yesterday afternoon in front of HORNBRAY's liquor saloon, No. 223 West Twenty-fifth-street, which will probably end in the death of one of the participants. It appears that a Mr. [illegible] and Mr. O'BRIEN, who [illegible] Twenty-eighth-street, [illegible] in the saloon, when it exploded, [illegible] Mr. O'BRIEN, who is expected will prove fatal. The parties to the affair are [illegible] Coroner HERRMAN will hold an inquest in the case.

Burglary in Twenty-Second-street.

A Mr. [illegible] Twenty-second-street, reported to the police that his house was entered by burglars on Friday night and robbed of a quantity of silver-ware. The burglars effected an entrance by forcing the window-shutters and sash of the dining-room, and then ascended to the second story, where they ransacked the bedrooms of the family. The property stolen is valued at $200. The burglars left no clue to their identity.

Burglary in Twenty-Fifth-street.

Yesterday afternoon Patrolman DOYLE, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, left the premises of Mr. [illegible], Twenty-fifth-street, for a few minutes, and on returning found the house had been entered by burglars and robbed of a quantity of silver-ware. The burglars effected an entrance by forcing the window-shutters and sash of the dining-room, and then ascended to the second story, where they ransacked the bedrooms of the family.
